FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE—

The U. S. Naval Engineering Experiment Station

By CAPT. FRED W. WALTON
Commanding Officer and Director

QUETING naval vessels to reduce the danger of detection by enemy listening devices—testing and developing propulsion plants to improve Fleet operations—continuous improvement of naval machinery, equipment and materials; these are some of the functions of the U. S. Naval Engineering Experiment Station at Annapolis, Md.

Capt. Walton

Located opposite the U. S. Naval Academy on the Severn River, the Experiment Station has been performing engineering service to the Fleet since its establishment in 1904. Its work is conducted in six major laboratories covering the fields of mechanical, chemical, electrical, welding and internal combustion engineering, acoustics and vibration, metallurgy, fuels and lubricants.

The Internal Combustion Engine Laboratory comprises one of the largest Diesel engine testing spaces in the world. Engines, generator sets and auxiliaries for submarines, minesweepers, tugs and other craft are tested and developed in this laboratory. All types of engine components and accessories including marine reverse and reduction gears, fuel injectors and fuel injector pumps, heat exchangers, cooling systems and filters are also investigated.

Adaptation of the snorkel system to American submarine engines was largely accomplished in this laboratory.

The Wave Mechanics Laboratory is concerned with the reduction of noise in naval machinery—a program of increasing significance to submarine warfare. Laboratory engineers are currently testing Diesel engines, pumps, blowers, electrical machinery and other auxiliary equipment used in submarines to find the major cause of noise. A specially constructed building and a submarine test facility are used for this work.

Machinery and equipment behavior under simulated combat conditions is also studied. A high impact shock machine is used for this purpose. The equipment to be tested is placed on a 4500 pound anvil table; a 3000 pound hammer strikes its underside. This severe shock testing indicates what can happen to equipment when a ship is attacked by mines, torpedoes, depth charges and bombs; also its

'54 Budget and Many Military Problems Confront President-Elect Eisenhower

Major problems affecting military policy, administration, and personnel confront President-elect Dwight D. Eisenhower.

As regards policy, General Eisenhower shortly will be involved in the preparation of budget estimates, for he has said, in a letter to President Truman, that he will soon name a representative to work on the final phases of the fiscal '54 budget.

Insofar as administration of the Armed Forces is concerned, General Eisenhower must name not only new civilian leaders but also, within seven months after his Inauguration, a new Chief of Staff for the Army and for the Air Force and a new Chairman of the JCS.

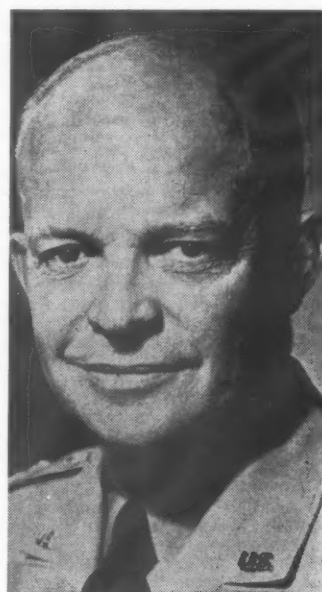

In the military personnel field, General Eisenhower will be called upon to reject or endorse a promised request from the Department of Defense for a minimum 6 per cent cost-of-living adjustment for those in Service.

Here is a chronological outline of the decisions which General Eisenhower must make in the next months and which will affect the future of all the Services.

Before he leaves for Korea, General Eisenhower will designate a deputy—possibly the next Secretary of Defense—to sit in on the final deliberations for the fiscal '54 budget. Actually, this budget will be sent to Congress before 18 Jan., two days before General Eisenhower's Inauguration as President, but it will be defended on Capitol Hill by men of the General's choosing.

Secretary Lovett, who has said he does not want to remain in the top Defense post, has urged that the President-elect name someone to represent him at the Pentagon. General Eisenhower, in his letter to the President, said that he will propose "individuals for indoctrination in several" departments.

Additionally, of course, General Eisenhower must choose a Secretary and Deputy Secretary of Defense and Secretaries of the Army, Navy, and Air Force. Also, there are three Assistant Secretaries of Defense to be designated and an Under Secretary and Assistant Secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force.

The chances are that there will be a complete turn-over in these jobs, although there is some possibility that Gen-

Rotation Points Likely To Be Boosted Again

Confronted with a lack of replacements from the United States and increased casualties as a result of stepped-up fighting in Korea, General Mark W. Clark, Far East Commander, is expected shortly to revise upward the rotation criteria for men behind the front lines in Korea.

Assistant Secretary of Defense Anna M. Rosenberg is now in the Far East and it is certain that discussion of the rotation problem is at the top of her agenda. It's no secret that General Clark has not had complete support.

In October, General Clark reluctantly was forced to raise from 36 to 38 the number of points needed for rotation, provided also that a suitable replacement was on hand.

Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, Jr.,

has instructed the Far East Commander to return to a 36-point basis for rotation of men in Zone A (front-line fighters) as quickly as possible.

To meet this order, General Clark undoubtedly will have no alternative but to extend the service of men behind the front lines, unless the flow of replacements to the Far East Command is greatly accelerated. This is not foreseen for the next few months, mainly because of reduced draft calls in the spring and summer months.

It is estimated that from the time the Army issues a draft call until a man is ready for combat service at the front in Korea the time interval is about seven months.

As the Theater Commander, General

Incentive Pay Group Slates Field Trips

The Strauss Commission, whose recommendations may affect the pay of thousands of men and women in uniform, will begin visits to the field next week.

The Commission is charged with the responsibility to make recommendations concerning such extra pay as Combat, Flight, Parachute, and Submarine Pay, Overseas Allowances, and $100 monthly added pay for doctors and dentists.

On Armistice Day, 11 Nov., the Commission, under the chairmanship of Lewis L. Strauss, former Atomic Energy Commissioner and a rear admiral in the Naval Reserve, will fly to Ft. Benning.

At Ft. Benning, arrangements are reported completed to show the Commission members the type of duties for which extra pay is now given. The visit will give Admiral Strauss and his associates first-hand information concerning the hazards which are involved.

At the Army's Infantry Center, the Commission will witness paratroop and airborne demonstrations and will hear reports on various aspects of incentive and hazardous duty pay for Army personnel.

According to tentative plans, the Commission will remain at Ft. Benning on 12 Nov. and the next day will travel to Ft. Jackson, S. C.

Later, the Commission is expected to go aboard a Navy carrier and submarine for on-the-spot briefings.

Then, the present plans call for a visit to Eglin AFB, Fla., for an Air Force presentation.

The Commission is expected to conduct an energetic program of field visits and hearings once activities are begun next week, for it is planned that the work will be completed about the first of the year.

In addition to Admiral Strauss, other members of the Commission are Don G. Mitchell, president of Sylvania Products; Harold Moulton, former president of Brookings Institution; John Thomas Cahill, member of the New York law firm of Cahill, Gordon, Zachry and Reindel; and Joseph Campbell, vice president of Columbia University.

Military Staff Director for the Commission is Rear Adm. J. L. Womble, USN.

Secretary of Defense Robert A. Lovett created the Commission in response to a request from Senator Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.), Chairman of the Armed Services Committee. An Armed Services Subcommittee went into the question of incentive and hazardous duty pay briefly during the last session of Congress, but failed to make definite recommendations. The subcommittee said the matter should be reviewed by a civilian commission.

When the Strauss Commission completes its work, recommendations will be made to the Secretary of Defense and will be sent, in turn, from the Pentagon to Capitol Hill.

Hard Fighting in Mountains Marks Week In Korea; Heavy Casualties on Both Sides

HARD fighting in the central mountain area of Korea continued throughout most of this week. There was particularly heavy action on Triangle Hill and Sniper Ridge, and farther east on Heartbreak Ridge.

Though there were tough battles almost every day during the week in the rugged mountains of Central Korea, with heavy casualties on both sides, there were no important changes of positions, and no significant penetrations of the line on either side.

Repeated efforts of charging South Korean infantry failed to dislodge the enemy from dominant positions on Triangle Hill, though they succeeded in gaining a foothold on Jane Russell Hill, one of several contested high points. Elsewhere on the hill they were stopped by murderous Communist mortar fire a few yards short of the crest. The Korean soldiers received powerful support of Allied massed artillery fire, but were halted by accurate Red mortars. Late this week Allied attempts to recapture Triangle Hill were suspended and action was limited to artillery fire.

On nearby Sniper Ridge South Korean defenders beat off numerous assaults by shock troops of the Chinese Communist Army. Disregarding heavy losses the Reds charged furiously with fanatical boldness, but were repeatedly cut down a few yards from their goal by deadly small arms and machine gun fire of the entrenched Koreans.

Farther east a North Korean Red battalion made a series of attacks on Heartbreak Ridge, but failed to effect a penetration. All assaults were beaten off, and relatively high casualties were inflicted on the enemy.

UN Still in Control

General James A. Van Fleet, USA, commanding the Eighth Army in Korea, said this week that United Nations forces remain in complete control of the embattled central front, despite failure of South Korean troops to reconquer lost positions on Triangle Hill. He said that the Allies occupy all needed territory in the Chorwon-Kumwha-Kumsong area, and will continue to chew up all Chinese thrown into battle. The general paid a tribute to the "magnificent job" performed by the heavily-engaged South Korean Army.

It was announced in Korea that approval had been received from the Defense Department in Washington for organizing, training, and equipping additional South Korean units in substantial numbers. During the recent Presidential campaign General Dwight D. Eisenhower advocated increased use of South Koreans in combat, and in support of his position quoted from a personal letter from General Van Fleet to a friend, in which he said that he had asked for authority to strengthen the South Korean army, but had not received it. Apparently approval reached him subsequent to the dispatch of the letter.

In naval action this week the U. S. Cruiser Toledo shelled enemy installations, including shore batteries, near the eastern end of the land battle line. Carrier planes flew numerous close support missions for ground troops, and hit enemy lines of communications along the east coast.

FEAF Busy

Land planes of the Far East Air Force rocketed and bombed troop concentrations and supply points in enemy territory, and also aided Allied ground troops in attacking hill positions held by the Reds in the central sector. American medium bombers hit supply depots at Anju, Sopo, and Anak in night attacks.

During the week the intensity of the ground fighting was heaviest in the central sector, but there was considerable local action on other fronts. In the west enemy groups up to platoon strength made probing attacks southeast of Panmunjom. One attack was directed against the hill known as Little Nori, northwest of Yonchon, and another at Allied positions west of Chorwon. These attacks were repulsed.

A United Nations patrol fought for more than five hours with an enemy platoon northwest of Yonchon. An enemy unit probing an Allied outpost west of Munsan was driven off in a brief firefight. Other patrol clashes occurred daily throughout the western sector.

On the central front fighting for possession of Triangle Hill and Sniper Ridge continued most of the week. At Triangle Hill, north of Kumwha, South Korean troops made repeated, but unsuccessful, efforts to recapture main ridge positions lost to the enemy last week. Northeast of the hill crest they lost and then regained a portion of twin peak positions, at a point known locally as Jane Russell Hill.

Aided by intensive Allied artillery fire the South Koreans several times advanced to within a few yards from the crest of Triangle Hill, but on each occasion they were halted by heavy mortar fire. Numerous casualties were inflicted on the Reds by the Allied artillery barrage, but they could not be dislodged from their strongly entrenched positions on the summit, and the Allied attacks were discontinued.

Chinese Attack

Chinese Communist troops, emerging from caves, tunnels and foxholes, repeatedly attacked South Korean positions on the crest of Sniper Ridge, adjacent to Triangle Hill. The defenders withdrew slightly from Pinpoint Hill, one of the dominant heights of the ridge, but later counter-attacked and restored their positions. Subsequent enemy attacks at this point were repulsed. Several Red night assaults came later, but all were driven back by the South Koreans, with heavy enemy casualties.

Three enemy platoons attacked Jackson Heights, south of Iron Horse Mountain, but were repulsed. Two Red companies, attacking at midnight northwest of Kumwha, were forced to withdraw after encountering heavy defensive small arms fire. Two enemy platoons at night charged an advance Allied position between Finger Ridge and Capitol Hill, and were driven off by alert United Nations troops.

Eighth Army soldiers at an advance hill position south of Pyonggang were engaged by a reinforced enemy company, which succeeded in temporarily occupying four bunkers at the northern tip of a hill. An Allied counter-attack restored the lost ground. Numerous skirmishes were fought elsewhere on the central front during the week by opposing patrols and small raiding parties.

Relatively heavy casualties were sustained by an enemy battalion in a three-and-one-half-hour fight for positions on Heartbreak Ridge on the eastern front. The engagement was broken off after midnight when the Reds withdrew. Later, other attacks were made on Allied outposts on this ridge, but all were beaten off. The enemy was strongly supported by heavy artillery and mortar fire.

Eastward across the Satae Valley, enemy units sought in night attacks to dislodge Allied troops from advance positions. All were driven back by the defending troops. A small enemy group probed outposts in the Punch Bowl, but was beaten off in a brief firefight. An Allied patrol west of the Mundung Valley had an inconclusive night engagement with two enemy platoons.

USS Toledo Shells Enemy

The U.S. Cruiser Toledo, screened by the Destroyer Anderson, carried out day and night bombardment of enemy installations at the eastern end of the land battle line. In the Kosong area the Toledo smashed supply shelters, ammunition dumps, vehicle sheds, and troop assembly points. Many buildings were destroyed or damaged, and secondary explosions were observed. Bunkers were destroyed, communications were cut, and shore batteries were silenced.

Also supporting front-line Allied ground troops near the east coast were the U.S. Destroyers Collett and Craig, which knocked out coastal guns and mortars. North of Tanchon the Craig fought a prolonged duel with enemy guns, while covering the U.S. Minesweeper Curlew. Seven Red guns laid nearly 1,000 rounds on the destroyer, but scored no hits, the warship escaping without damage or casualties.

On the west coast the Australian Destroyers Condamine and Anzac hurled 5-inch shells into trucks and shelter caves opposite Chodo.

Navy planes from the U. S. Carriers Essex and Bon Homme Richard, off the east coast, raided enemy installations from Wonsan to Songjin, and on the Red-held city of Tanchon. Navy jets destroyed or damaged numerous buildings, cut rail lines, and in the Tanchon area damaged fish processing plants. A railway marshaling yard north of Tanchon was hit, and secondary explosions erupted when boxcars were bombed. Heavy smoke obliterated the entire target area.

At Chuuronjang Skyraiders from the Essex knocked out railway bridges, and destroyed barracks, leaving large fires. Effective strikes were made on gun positions and troop shelters north of Chorwon in close support operations.

Close Support By Marines

Marine flyers from the U.S. Carrier Badoeng Strait in the Yellow Sea, off the west coast, flew numerous close support missions on the central front. Along the west coast the Marine planes hit buildings, gun positions, bridges, and troop shelters south of Chinnampo. About 800 Red troops fled from barracks taken under attack. Direct hits were made on enemy guns, bridges, a rocket site, and a boat. A rail tunnel entrance was sealed by a well-placed bomb.

Far East Air Force land planes had a full week of operations, which included many close support strikes, attacks on supply areas, and interdiction of lines of communication.

United States F-80 Shooting Stars and Marine shore-based planes destroyed many buildings and supply dumps on the Haeju peninsula, where an ammunition store was exploded. F-84 Thunder Jets and Marine aircraft cut rails south of Samdung, while South Korean F-51 Mustangs destroyed boxcars south of Kowan.

Southeast of Chaeryong South Korean Mustangs and Australian Meteor jets hit troop concentrations with bombs, rockets, and machinegun fire, destroying buildings, and starting large fires.

F-84s and Marine planes scored direct hits on a rail tunnel, sealing one end, and F-80s, directed by RF-51s, struck a vehicle parking area just north of the central front, destroying several trucks, and touching off a secondary explosion. Australian Meteors rocketed troop concentrations south of Sinchon, leveling buildings, and starting fires.

Fighter-Bombers Active

All available types of fighter-bombers participated in close support strikes on front-line battle targets. F-80s, F-51s, F-84s, Marine and South Korean aircraft, directed by T-6 Mosquitoes and RF-51 Mustangs, destroyed gun positions and bunkers, and inflicted heavy troop casualties on the enemy, along the central front.

American B-26 light bombers, making daylight and night attacks, hit Communist supply routes and rolling stock. They bombed a rail bridge north of Kumsong, and destroyed numerous trucks, rail cars, and at least one locomotive. Night-flying light bombers and Marine planes also flew close support missions in the western and central sectors.

Superforts of the Bomber Command in night attacks hit supply targets at Anju, Sopo, and Anak, with 500-lb. bombs. Meager flak was encountered and there was a non-firing pass by an enemy night fighter.

The Defense Department this week announced that American battle casualties from the start of the Korean War to include notifications of next of kin through 31 October now total 124,569. Of these 21,700 were killed in action or died of wounds; 92,275 wounded in action, including 2,047 who died; and 12,848 missing in action, including 207 who died, 1,390 who returned to military control, and 1,906 captured by the enemy, leaving 9,345 currently missing.

Of the total American battle casualties 98,134 were sustained by the Army, 1,690 by the Navy, 23,440 by the Marine Corps, and 1,305 by the Air Force.

USMC Chinese Course

The Marine Corps has announced that it desires applications from Regular captains and lieutenants for a Chinese Language Course to commence on 5 Jan. at the U. S. Naval School, Naval Intelligence, U. S. Naval Receiving Station, Washington, D. C.

The quota for the 18-month course in Mandarin (KUOYU) Chinese is for three officers. Applicants must reach HQMC by 20 Nov.

Medical Mobilization

Lt. Col. Harvey E. Archer, MSC, has been transferred from the Medical Section of the Far East Command, where he was the chief of the Plans and Operations Branch, to the Office of the Army Surgeon General, where he will be concerned with mobilization planning.

Colonel and Mrs. Archer now make their home with son J. Barry and daughter Joan C. at 6320 N. 25th St., Arlington, Va.

Navy Makes Strides In Housing Program

The Navy has made "excellent progress" in providing housing for the dependents of servicemen during the past year, according to Senator Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Tex.), Chairman of the Senate Preparedness Investigating Subcommittee.

In a letter to Under Secretary of the Navy Francis P. Whitehair, who has been in charge of the housing program for the Navy, Senator Johnson said he was "gratified" to see the steps which have been taken to "remedy the deficiencies found by the Senate Preparedness Committee a year ago." At that time, numerous Navy and Marine Corps bases were charged with serious derelictions in the field of dependent housing.

Permanent Construction

Secretary Whitehair reported that new permanent construction in the past year has given the Navy 13,000 units either completed or under construction. Five thousand of these units are now occupied, he said, and by 1 Jan., "the number of units occupied or under construction will be approximately 18,000." He noted that "Almost all of this progress has been made in the past year" under Title VIII of the National Housing Act and that the total housing of this type will eventually reach an amount in "excess of 30,000 units."

He said the "greatest problem" encountered by the Navy in connection with Title VIII housing "has been to design housing projects so that the investment in construction costs would not require high rentals. Every effort," he said, "has been made to keep rentals and the cost of utilities less than the rental allowances of enlisted men in order to provide a margin of safety."

Pictures of representative projects completed at two Navy and Marine bases are shown in the adjoining column.

"In order to alleviate substandard housing conditions in the Pacific Area," Mr. Whitehair said "a program was proposed for the replacement of 2,400 units of substandard interim housing with permanent type family housing." Eight hundred units will be replaced each year under this program which will take three years to complete.

Rental Units Improved

More than 3,000 Government-owned rental units were improved and brought up to minimum standard for assignment as public quarters during the year.

Mr. Whitehair revealed that the Navy is now testing "a new type unit at the Naval Powder Factory, Indian Head, Md., in an attempt to obtain 'the best possible family housing for low-income military personnel.'"

The unit was developed by the Prefabricated Home Manufacturer's Institute and is a demountable type to be used in areas where only temporary housing can be obtained. The "demountable" feature, Mr. Whitehair said, will assure a maximum salvage or re-use value when the temporary housing requirement at a particular locality has been eased.

The Under Secretary said "It is believed that this unit offers considerably improved accommodations and amenities at substantially the same cost as the demountable units previously developed."

Mr. Whitehair said the Navy's housing program is now "well on its way," and that upon his recommendation the responsibility for the program has been transferred to Assistant Secretary of the Navy Herbert B. Askins.

Secretary Askins' office is in charge of procurement, and Mr. Whitehair said he believes the acquisition of housing should properly be a function of the procurement office.

Ordnance Expert Retires

Ending a military career which began more than 35 years ago, Lt. Col. Harry M. Walker, post engineer the past four years at Fort Wadsworth and Miller Field, Staten Island, N. Y., left Fort Wadsworth 30 Oct. to await orders retiring him from the service.

Colonel Walker was one of the Army's bomb disposal experts in World War II.

New housing at Navy and Marine Corps bases is typified by units located in the Tarawa Terrace development at Camp Lejeune, N. C. (upper), and two-story structures for personnel of the Severn River Naval Command at Annapolis (lower). Both projects were completed under the provisions of Title VIII of the National Housing Act.

First Reunion of IV Corps Hears Gen. Crittenger

The first reunion of the IV Corps Headquarters since the inactivation in Italy of that organization in Sept. 1945, was held in the Commodore Hotel, N. Y., on 1 Nov.

Approximately 100 veterans of the headquarters of the Corps that was in combat with the Germans for 401 consecutive days in the campaign of 1944-1945 gathered from all over the country for the purpose of organizing the IV Corps Association.

After registration in the morning, a business meeting was held at which Mr. Henry Morelli, New York City, was elected Chairman with a board made up of the following:

Harry H. Semmes, Washington, D. C.; Mr. Hamilton T. Walker, Collingswood, N. J.; Mr. Edmund D. Cunningham, Jr., Springfield, Mass.; Mr. Frank Warneke, Kansas City, Kans.; Fred E. Case, Los Angeles, Calif.; Mr. Joseph N. Salvatore, Trenton, N. J.; Mr. Frank F. Stanton, Painesville, Ohio; Sgt. William A. Cunningham, New York City; and Lt. Col. Brewster Perry, Governors Island, N. Y.

At the banquet in the evening, H. T. Walker, former Civil Affairs Officer of the IV Corps, presided. The speaker was Lt. Gen. Willis D. Crittenger, now commanding the First Army, who was in command of the IV Corps from the day it arrived in Italy and began its advance up the shin bone of the Italian boot, until the surrender at Castiglione on 29 Apr. 1945, and later its return to the United States.

At the banquet messages of greeting were read from:

Gen. Eisenhower's Views On National Defense Needs

President-elect Eisenhower's major address on national defense during the political campaign was delivered on 25 Sept. at Baltimore, Md., where he said that "our people's need for a stout defense is beyond debate," but emphasized that this defense must be built with "wisdom and efficiency." He called for "security with solvency."

General Eisenhower made two major proposals: (1) creation of a civilian commission to restudy the operations, functions, acts of the Department of Defense; and (2) the extension of membership on the National Security Council to "civilians of the highest capacity, integrity and dedication to public service."

The civilian commission, General Eisenhower proposed, would include members of both political parties and they would be assisted "by the ablest officers" from all the Services.

Their task, he said, "should be to design an over-all scheme of national security best suited to our inventive, productive and military genius and to our geographic and strategic position in the world."

General Eisenhower said the mandate of such a commission "should include the whole matter of military manpower."

General Eisenhower maintained that the defense program has suffered from three shortcomings which he described as follows:

"First, our defense program has suffered from lack of far-sighted direction. Second, real unification of our Armed Forces is yet to be achieved. Third, our defense program need not and must not push us toward economic collapse."

General Eisenhower said he did not want to criticize the Chiefs of Staff of men and women in uniform and in civilian clothes in the Department of Defense. "They are among the best... if not the best, of their kind in the world."

He charged, however, that there has been "routine in planning and operation, failure to establish clean-cut lines of authority and failure in preparatory work to combine industrial and military leadership."

"Finally," he added, "I mean to criticize lack of imagination and firmness in the over-all political direction which guides all security planning."

In the Baltimore speech, General Eisenhower said the largest saving in the Federal budget can be made from the $60 billion for national security. He said these savings must be made without reduction of defensive power and added "that is exactly what I am now proposing."

He warned against stop-and-start planning and spoke out against the practice of what he called "special interests in the Armed Services" carrying their appeals to Congress—"sometimes without the knowledge of any of their civilian superiors."

"Service disagreements have become public brawls," General Eisenhower said.

Describing advances in science, and their impact on military planning, General Eisenhower declared that "we must press for a weapons program that is realistic. We cannot pretend to do everything in every field all the time."

"Our judgment in weapon development must be sure and sound and related to tactical needs," General Eisenhower continued. "To do this, the professional fighting man requires the advice of both industry and labor."

The former Army Chief of Staff said that "whenever a new weapon comes from the laboratories, all Services—sometimes understandably—demand the right to use it. Stranger than this is the almost inevitable demand of each Service to do the research, development and production work on new weapons. Each believes that it can do the work best."

"In this matter, prompt adjudication among the Services is mandatory—otherwise you will find all three engaged in spending your money for a single need," said General Eisenhower.

He added that "to save money and in-

USAREUR Dependents Delayed

Dependents of more than 800 USAREUR assigned personnel are being delayed in going to Europe because they failed to obtain passports, U. S. Army Headquarters has announced.

The dependents did not follow instructions concerning the request for passports and will not be permitted to leave the United States until they receive passports.

Instructions, forwarded to the dependents by USAREUR and again by the responsible Army area commander in the United States, urge them to apply for passports immediately as the normal time for processing such applications is a minimum of 30 days.

Although Department of the Army and USAREUR Headquarters are taking all possible action to expedite the processing of passports and shipment of dependents, officials here stated that the dependents involved must apply for the required passport and then wait for available shipping space to come to Europe.

USAREUR advised personnel to warn their dependents expecting movement to the command of the importance of immediate action in applying for passports.

Clark has authority to establish the rotation criteria, but it is well known that because of other than strictly military implications, such decisions are always well coordinated with Washington.

Reports have persisted that the political activity in the United States was having some effect on announcements regarding rotation. The end of the political campaign may well be followed by new word from the Far East of extended tours of duty for men in rear areas of Korea.

General Clark does have available some troops in Japan and Okinawa, but these are not of sufficient number to permit any significant shuffling of troops to and from combat in the Far East. Also, a large percentage of these troops, particularly those in Japan, already have seen service in Korea.

Therefore, General Clark must rely almost exclusively on replacements from the United States to meet rotation goals. These replacements are not immediately available; hence, it's likely rotation points will be increased for men not in Zone A—to 40 points or even above instead of the current 38.

Text of Rotation Statement

That General Clark wants to keep rotation moving at as quick a pace as replacements will permit is stressed in his recent statement on this subject, the text of which follows:

"The rotation of our front-line soldiers in Korea has been and continues to be a source of great concern to me. No one realizes better than I, who served so many years in the infantry, that these men who are actually facing a vicious and treacherous enemy are carrying the maximum burden, facing the maximum risks. It is among this group that casualties are highest, and it is among the parents and relatives of these men that concern is greatest—as I, whose son—an infantryman—was wounded three times in action in Korea, can testify. My heart is ever with these front-line men and with those who are near and dear to them.

"For a number of months I and my staff have been working on plans to assure the release of these front-line veterans as soon as they have achieved 36 constructive months' service (CMS) points. The rotation of these men, however, as well as the rotation of other Army personnel in the Far East Command, has depended and must continue to depend upon the arrival of replacements from the United States. Each month, FEC forecasts the number of replacements required from the Zone of the Interior and notifies appropriate authorities in Washington. Correspondence between my headquarters and the Department of the Army in September of this year clearly stated that unless more replacements were made available immediately, it would be necessary, in order to maintain the combat effectiveness of our forces, to increase the CMS criteria to 38 points. In view of the number of replacements made available to me in October, I was compelled, as a precautionary measure, to establish a tentative over-all 38 CMS point criterion.

"At the same time, I and my staff have devoted untold hours in exploring every means by which the criteria for front line troops could be maintained at 36 CMS. This was no small task and required extremely complicated changes, adjustments, and various expedients, but despite these difficulties means have been found and all front line soldiers with 36 CMS will be withdrawn from Zone A at the end of October.

"To achieve this, it will be necessary to make many shifts in personnel. This means that men in units behind the lines in Korea, and personnel in Japan and Okinawa must accrue more CMS points before they are eligible for rotation—at least, until the flow of replacements from the United States is stepped up. I consider, and I am sure there will be general agreement, that those individuals who are not exposed to the dangers and extreme rigors of front line service, will accept this as just and fair.

"What we are doing now is only a temporary solution, but it does accomplish the purpose which is ever foremost in my thinking—to effect the rotation, at the earliest possible time, of the men in the front lines who daily, even hourly, expose themselves to death or wounds in defending all that we hold dear. I am determined that everything possible will be done to lighten their burden, and to minimize the anxiety of their loved ones. However, permanent solution to the problem of rotation, I repeat, depends upon the arrival of replacements from the United States, for it is obvious that departures cannot exceed arrivals if combat efficiency is to be maintained."

MPC Officer Retires

Lt. Col. Edward J. Kane, MPC, assigned to the Office of the Provost Marshal General, retired from the Army on 31 Oct. ending a service career that started with his enlistment in the Illinois National Guard in 1911.

Since his assignment in March, 1949 to the Office of the Provost Marshal General Colonel Kane has been the administrative inspector of confinement facilities for the Provost Marshal General.

Capt. Thyson Retires

Capt. Leo Cromwell Thyson, MC, USN, Commanding Officer of the Naval Dispensary, Navy Department, Washington, D. C., was retired on 1 Nov. after reaching the statutory retirement age. He had completed over 35 years service.

Retirement ceremonies for Captain Thyson were held on 30 Oct. at the Navy Department Office of the Surgeon General of the Navy, Rear Adm. Lamont Pugh, MC, USN.

Marine Promotion Expansion Not Set

The Marine Corps said this week that promotions within the Corps during fiscal 1954 are not being planned on the scale predicted last week in a JOURNAL article, "USMC Promotion Prospects for Officers," which outlined "probable" increases in all officer ranks.

Headquarters said, "Statements outlined in the article relating to a greatly expanded promotion policy to be instituted by the Marine Corps immediately after the end of fiscal year 1953 do not represent current or past plans of the Marine Corps. The restrictions of the Davis Amendment, although affecting each grade above lieutenant, are not sufficiently beneath requested officer grade requirements to make extensive promotion either necessary or desirable."

Statements by General Lemuel C. Shepherd, jr., Commandant of the Marine Corps, quoted in THE JOURNAL, were made by him last April during hearings on the Department of Defense Appropriation Act for fiscal year 1953. Headquarters said "These statements were designed to indicate the potential effects of the then proposed Davis Amendment to that Act, and were in no way related to the promotion plans of the Marine Corps."

The article was not attributed to any Marine official or office and did not purport to have the official sanction or approval of the Marine Corps. It was written by THE JOURNAL after a careful study of existing laws and regulations, correlated with past and present promotion policies and the projected strength authorizations of the Corps.

Management Meeting Ends

The fall session of the Navy Management Improvement Institute came to a close on 31 Oct., when Under Secretary of the Navy Francis P. Whitehair presented the 25 delegates in attendance with certificates of training.

The Navy said, "trainees were chosen from the various bureaus and offices of the Department of the Navy and its field activities. It is the intent of the sponsor of the Institute, Capt. L. D. Whitgrove, at the request of the Under Secretary, to conduct the Institute on a quarterly basis in order that every individual in a key position throughout the Naval Establishment may eventually have the opportunity of participating."

During the course of training an effort was made to examine the merits of programs now in operation and to assess their value in relation to the fundamental mission of the Navy.

Assistant Secretary of Defense W. J. McNeil addressed the delegates on the opening day after a welcoming speech by Captain Whitgrove. Lectures were delivered by Maj. Gen. R. J. Brown, Director of Manpower and Organization in the Air Force, Lt. Col. C. H. Waters, from the Department of the Army, and Rear Adms. E. A. Solomons, H. M. Watt, jr., F. L. Hetter and others in key positions of the Military Establishment.

Need PIO Officers

The Navy announced this week that it needs officers for duty in shore, staff and overseas PIO billets "to provide for normal rotation of officers currently serving in such assignments."

In general, the Chief of Naval Personnel said, "Reserve and Regular line officers in the ranks of lieutenant (jg) through captain are desired." Applicants should preferably have had experience or education in some phase of journalism, public information, or public relations. The Navy noted, however, "previous experience in this is not a prerequisite."

Requests may be submitted to the Chief of Naval Personnel (Attention: Pers B1115) in letter form including any qualifications which the applicant considers pertinent.

Eligibility requirements are as follows:

All captains, commanders, and lieutenant commanders—(USN and USNR)—must be eligible for shore or overseas duty.

Lieutenants and lieutenants (jg) (1300 series)—(USN and USNR)—must have completed 36 months in an operating squadron.

Lieutenants (1100 series)—(USN)—must have completed a minimum of six years' sea duty and a minimum of 18 months' present duty station by 1 Jan. 1953.

Lieutenants (1100 series)—(USNR)—(a) must have three years' total active duty, (b) two years' total sea duty, and (c) one year present duty station by 1 Jan. 1953.

Lieutenants (jg) (1100 series)—(USN)—must have completed a minimum of four years' shipboard duty.

Lieutenants (jg)—(1100 series)—(USNR)—must have completed a minimum six months in current assignment.

All Reserve officer above the rank of lieutenant (jg)—must prior to 1 July 1952 have expressed a desire (Release Questionnaire) to remain on active duty until at least June 1954.

All Wave officers—must have a minimum of two years' present duty.

Navy Board Members

The Navy this week released the names of twenty officers who make up the membership of the selection board which was convened on 28 Oct. to name officers for temporary promotion to the rank of commander.

President of the board is Rear Adm. Augustus J. Wellings. Other members are Rear Admirals Ralph E. Wilson and Lester K. Wright, and Captains Edwin E. Woods, Wendell E. Krast, Albert Alvord, J. USMC Marksmanship

to be Given More Emphasis

The Marine Commandant, General Lemuel C. Shepherd, jr., has advised his field commanders that present interest in individual marksmanship training throughout the Marine Corps "is far below the pre-World War II standard" and should be given greater emphasis.

To achieve this emphasis, Headquarters suggests that Marine commanders conduct marksmanship training "during all periods of the calendar year when weather conditions will permit firing." At the same time, it was pointed out to commanding officers that Marines "will not be transferred to combat duty until after they have completed the marksmanship training required by current directives."

The importance of such training was stressed by the issuance of four separate directives on the subject over a period of less than three weeks. The first of these was a memorandum, MarCorps Memo No. 108, which requested Marine CO's to report before the end of the year on the number of rifle and pistol ranges (Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps, civilian, police, etc.) which are presently available or could be obtained for use by the Marines.

A second directive noted the drop in pre-WWII standards, which has been influenced by the lack of qualified coaches, and directed that a drive be instituted to make better use of personnel who received advanced marksmanship training in the 1952 Division and Corps Rifle Matches. Marines who received such training were listed in MarCorps Memo No. 112, and CO's were directed "where applicable" to assign additional MOS's (4963 or 4969) to these men.

1953 Matches

Another directive, MarCorps Memo 116, set up the plan for year-round training, and a fourth, MarCorps Memo 117, outlined plans for the 1953 rifle and pistol competitions, which will be held as follows:

Western Division—San Diego Trophy Match, 16-21 March, MCRD, San Diego.

Eastern Division—27 April-2 May, Marine Corps Schools, Quantico.

South Eastern Division—6-11 April, Marine Barracks, Camp Lejeune.

Marine Corps—Lauchheimer Trophy Match, Elliott and Wirgman Trophy Match, Inter-Division Team Matches, 4-16 May, Marine Corps Schools, Quantico.

National Matches—Intensive training for the Marine Corps rifle and pistol team for the National Matches will be held during the period 25 May-15 Aug., at MCRD, Parris Island.

Every Marine post or separate activity with a T/O enlisted strength of 50 or more will be required to enter a trophy team in the San Diego Trophy Match, the Elliott Trophy Match or the Wirgman Trophy Match, "unless specifically excused by the Commandant," the directive notes.

CO's were urged to give their personal attention to the selection of a team to represent their organization, and the Memorandum states, "All organizations must be represented in these matches. Exceptions will not be made by the Commandant of the Marine Corps unless the selection of a team would create an extreme hardship on a command."

Training For Former Naval ROTC Officers

The Navy has announced that ensigns and lieutenants (jg) commissioned as line officers in the Navy from NROTC units are now eligible for certain courses of instruction and change in designation from line to restricted line or staff, even though they have not yet been selected for retention in a career status.

Such officers may now request flight training, submarine training or postgraduate instruction. Other courses of instruction also are available provided the officer agrees in his application to extend his active tour in accordance with existing requirements for Reserve officers (this clause will be invoked, the Navy said, only if the officer concerned does not apply for retention in the Navy or is not selected for retention), or if the officer has sufficient obligated service remaining upon completion of the course to warrant assignment.

In addition, such officers can request a change in designation to ED, SD or AED if they have been issued waivers of physical defect in connection with their appointments. Applications are not to be submitted until the applicant has completed one year's service at sea.

Requests for change from line to staff embody the same requirements for ED, SD or AED. However, the Navy said "All officers may, in accordance with applicable directives, request assignment to courses of instruction leading to staff corps designations. In some cases officers who attended such courses of instruction will be changed in designation from line to staff corps prior to standing selection for retention in career status."

In connection with the announcement, the Navy said all such officers "who complete three years of service and are selected for retention in a career USN status will be eligible for all training and assignments open to their contemporaries."

"THE KICKAPOO RIVER IS LOOSE AGAIN"

Heroic Operator helps protect town from flood

Awarded Vail Medal for courage; initiative and devotion to duty.
Honored at civic dinner.

It was a quiet Saturday morning in Gays Mills, Wisconsin. A steady rain had drenched the town and folks were staying indoors.

Then suddenly a flash came by telephone to Mrs. Wilma Gander, the town's chief operator. "The Kickapoo River is loose again, fifteen miles upstream."

Although Gays Mills did not appear in imminent danger, Mrs. Gander had been through floods before and she had the foresight to see what might happen. So she pressed the button on her switchboard that set off the village fire siren.

High waters. The Kickapoo River, as it neared its crest, overflowed the bridge near Gays Mills. The water was nearly five feet deep outside the telephone office.

Immediately people began calling in and rushing in. "Where's the fire?" they asked.

"No fire," answered Mrs. Gander. "It's a flood. The Kickapoo's over its banks and the flood is headed this way."

Quickly the word was passed. People collected such belongings as they could and made their way to safer places.

Mrs. Gander next alerted the Red Cross, the National Guard and the Army and called in a lineman to help prepare the telephone exchange for high water.

The doors were made as watertight as possible, the switchboard raised on concrete blocks, and an outside telephone line established on an upper floor.

Mrs. Gander stuck to her post hours after the crest of the flood had passed. By warning the town, and keeping telephone service going, she helped to protect the lives and property of hundreds of people.

The story has three other happy endings.

Mrs. Gander was honored by the grateful citizens of the town at a civic dinner. The Bell System awarded her the highly prized Theodore N. Vail Medal and presented a commemorative bronze plaque to the Utica Farmers Telephone Company.

Vail medals, accompanied by cash awards, have been given annually by the Bell System since 1920 for acts of noteworthy public service by telephone employees.

HELPING HANDS—This is one of the many stories of the skill, courage and resourcefulness of telephone men and women in times of emergency. . . . Not all of them tell of the saving of a town or a life. But there is scarcely a minute that someone in trouble or urgent need does not turn to the telephone for help. . . . BELL TELEPHONE SYSTEM

SAC Bomb Wing To B-47's

The Strategic Air Command's (SAC) 22d Bombardment Wing at March AFB, Riverside, Calif., presently equipped with Boeing B-29s, soon will be converted to a B-47 Stratojet unit, Maj. Gen. Emmett (Rosy) O'Donnell, Jr., USAF, commander of the Fifteenth Air Force, announced this week.

This will be the first Air Force organization on the West Coast, and one of the first in the USAF, to receive the new Boeing 600 mile an hour swept-wing bombers, General O'Donnell said.

Although the new six-jet mediums will not begin to arrive at March AFB for several months, preconversion training of flying and maintenance personnel has begun.

Col. John B. Henry, Jr., is commander of the 22d Wing.

It is expected that the equipping of the wing with the Boeing Stratojets, the world's fastest strategic medium bomber, will begin about the first of the year and should be completed by spring 1953.

Long-range planning within SAC has made it possible to have aerial tankers (KC-97s), capable of refueling the B-47 during flight, available for operation to coincide with delivery of the new Stratojet. Two such aerial refueling units, the 22d and 106th Air Refueling Squadrons, equipped with the Boeing-built KC-97, were recently activated at March.

The B-47 is powered by six General Electric J-47 turbojet engines, 18 integral rocket-assist units are mounted in the rear fuselage, providing an additional 20,000 pounds of thrust. The Stratojets are factory-equipped for flying boom aerial refueling. Range without refueling is listed as more than 3000 miles. The sleek bomber carries more than 20,000 pounds of bombs, a 3-man crew and has a gross weight of more than 185,000 pounds.

Airlift Recon Wings

Tactical Air Command's month-long airlift of two Strategic Air Command reconnaissance wings rotating at Ramey AFB, Puerto Rico, has been completed.

The troop carrier airplanes from TAC's Eighteenth Air Force moved over 1200 men and 2,000,000 pounds of equipment since the two-way airlift began 1 Oct.—the first use of troop carriers for the air movement of SAC wings.

On flights leaving Ramey, C-46 and C-124 airplanes from the 514th and 62d Troop Carrier Wings carried the men and equipment of the 55th Strategic Reconnaissance Wing to their new station at Forbes AFB, Kans. The troop carrier planes flying to Ramey from bases in the United States, carried equipment for the 72d Strategic Reconnaissance Wing now based in Puerto Rico.

The C-46's carried most of the personnel and the smaller loads, and the C-124's were used for special loads that could not fit in the smaller airplanes. One of the C-124 flights carried six jet engines, each weighing over 2,500 pounds, and on another flight, a 39,000 pound mobile training unit was airlifted to the Caribbean base.

Assigned to Purdue

Two Air Force officers have been assigned to Purdue University's staff as assistant professors of Air Science and Tactics to meet the demands of the largest AFORTC enrollment in the university's history. Capt. James B. Smith, formerly with the Office of Special Investigations, Tinker AFB, Okla., has been added to the World Political Geography teaching staff. Capt. James B. Woodruff, who has been assigned to the staff in Aerodynamics-Weather-Navigation section, was training aids officer at Nellis AFB, Nev.

Manpower Course

More than 150 officers at Lackland AFB, Tex., are midway in a course that management experts say promises to blaze new trails in the Air Force field of human relations.

They are engaged in a six months combined seminar, lecture and study class called the Lackland Executive Development Course. Patterned after the commanders' manpower and management course taught at George Washington University, it was planned and developed by Brig. Gen. Wycliffe E. Steele, base commander, on his return to Lackland after completion of the G.W.U. course.

"The George Washington course was an inspiration to me," the general said. "I believed a similar program could be implemented at base level. It has turned out even better than I hoped."

To begin with, an instructor nucleus was obtained from base personnel who have attended the university course. Among these were Col. Lloyd C. Dean, C.O. Air Base Group; Lt. Col. Wallace Wall, Jr., C.O. 3720 Basic Military Training Group; Lt. Col. Carl D. Sutherland, Wing Personnel Officer and Clint C. Jagge, civilian director of the base manpower and management program.

Contracts were then made with outstanding military and civilian authorities in the field to schedule their appearance as visiting lecturers.

The faculty was thus supplemented and objectives of the course were summarized. These included "the creation of awareness of manpower and management procedures, a better understanding of human relations and a more complete idea of personnel conservation."

Lt. Col. Frank J. P. Rasor, the man who implemented the Air Force citizenship education program at Lackland, was designated as project officer. It was decided, in launching the teaching, that enrollees should consist of the base's field grade officers, most of whom were operating executives able to translate their learning into practice.

Spreading the sessions throughout a six month period was calculated to enable regular attendance without disrupting regular duties of the enrollees. Instruction was divided into two phases, the concentrated study phase with sessions completed during a one month period, and the lecture phase, with sessions stretching out over the whole six months.

AF Finance Courses

The Air Force has announced plans for two finance courses, formerly conducted under the Army.

The Advanced Airmen's Finance Course will begin 29 Nov. and the Finance Officers' Course on 8 Jan. 1953 under the Department of Comptroller Training at Lowry AFB, Colo.

Math Aids Strategy

Graduate students and faculty members at Johns Hopkins University will hear how military doctrine can be expressed in mathematical language in a series of three lectures to be presented by Col. O. G. Haywood, Jr., of Air Research and Development Command (ARDC) Headquarters at Baltimore, Md.

The lectures, which will be on the von Neumann theory of games and its correlation with military doctrine of decision, are scheduled for the first three Mondays of November.

The theory of games was formulated by Dr. John von Neumann of the Institute of Advanced Study, Princeton, N. J. His theory was the first mathematical approach to the problem of making decisions in a conflict in which the outcome is determined, at least in part, by the rational actions of the contestants. It is possible that this theory, as a mathematical device for analyzing the outcome of conflict, may furnish a tool of value to military commanders in arriving at decisions concerning courses of action or strategy.

Colonel Haywood, while a student at the Air War College at Maxwell AFB, Alabama, wrote a paper correlating the von Neumann theory with military doctrine of decision. In it, he analyzed this doctrine in the light of the theory of games and evaluated other doctrines of decision of possible military value.

Colonel Haywood is in charge of ARDC's Office of Scientific Research, which directs basic research in fields of science of interest to the U. S. Air Force.

Before joining the Command a year ago, he had previous key assignments with the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory, the "Manhattan Engineer Project," the Atomic Energy Commission, the General Staff of the War Department, and the War Plans Division at U. S. Air Force Headquarters. Colonel Haywood was graduated from the U. S. Military Academy in 1936 at the top of his class. He also has a Master's degree from Harvard University and a Doctorate of Science degree from Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Air Surgeon Is Host

Air Force Surgeon General Harry G. Armstrong, President of the Association of Military Surgeons, will be host to the Surgeon General of the Korean Army and more than 50 leading military physicians from the armed forces of 20 nations at the 59th annual meeting of the Association in Washington, D. C., 17-19 Nov.

More than 2,000 Reserve and Regular officers of the Federal health services are expected to attend the meeting of this Association which was organized in 1891 and incorporated by an act of Congress in 1903. It is devoted solely to the specialty of military medicine, especially new and improved techniques in the care of battle casualties and the rapid evacuation of wounded to established hospitals behind the lines.

Brig. Gen. Tchi-Wang Yoon, Surgeon General of the Republic of Korea Army, and the four medical officers accompanying him to Washington are among the high-ranking foreign officers who will be awarded the gold cross of the Association by General Armstrong and presented with certificates of honorary membership.

Show World We Are United Is Plea of General Bradley

General Omar N. Bradley, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, urged this week that the American people demonstrate to the world that we are united.

In an interview, the General stressed three points of utmost concern at this time. First, was the matter of our stand in Korea. He pointed out that there is only one element of disagreement at Panmunjom—forced repatriation of prisoners of war. We must stick to our principle there, he said, both because it is the ideal of democracy to recognize the right of the individual and also because if we adhere to it we will be "going a long way" toward avoiding World War III.

"If the Communists realize," General Bradley said, "that we will always stick to this principle, they may hesitate to start other conflicts. Because the men they send against us will know that, if they surrender, they will be taken care of and not forced to return behind the Iron Curtain."

General Bradley's second point was that we must avoid the Communist line of magnifying the differences between us and our allies. Every once in a while, he said, we see news articles about growing tension between the United States and France or between the United States and Britain. He said that it is quite apparent that the Communists are conducting a campaign to "make us fall out and quarrel among ourselves." This is a trap we must avoid, he declared.

Finally, General Bradley, who has made no speeches since the opening of the political campaigns which have just ended, said that he hopes there will be an early end of the bitterness aroused during the campaigns.

"Let us hope," the General said, "that any scars caused by the bitterness of this campaign can be quickly healed so that we can act with unity and so that we will not leave the impression on our friends that we are a Nation divided. We must stand together and have teamwork."

Commands Prepare Data for Promotion Action

Air Force commanders and particularly their personnel officers were busy this week compiling lists of officers eligible for consideration for temporary promotions under criteria reported in last week's issue of THE JOURNAL.

A report on the number of eligibles in each rank as of 30 Nov. 1952 is due at the Pentagon on or before 29 Dec. and Air Force officials plan to announce promotion quotas to the commands about 31 Dec.

Here are the criteria repeated, for what will be the only temporary promotion program in the Air Force during the current fiscal year.

1. To Colonel—Date of initial appointment prior to 1 Apr. '51 as Lt. Col., and Minimum AFCS as of 1 Jan. '53, 12 mos. as Lt. Col.;

To Lt. Colonel—Date of initial appointment prior to 1 Apr. '51 as Lt. Col., and Minimum AFCS as of 1 Jan. '53, 12 mos. as Major.;

To Major—Date of initial appointment prior to 1 July '51 as Capt., and Minimum AFCS as of 1 Jan. '53, 12 mos. as Capt.;

To Captain—Date of initial appointment prior to 1 July '51 as 1st Lt., and Minimum AFCS as of 1 Jan. '53, 6 months as 1st Lt.

2. AF Res. or ANGUS officers serving on active duty in grade lower than those held in AF Res. or ANGUS.

3. ANGUS officers serving on active duty in a grade lower than the AF Res. grade they resigned in order to accept appointment in ANGUS.

4. All officers serving on active duty as Lt. Col. who formerly served on active duty in grade of Colonel and were reduced from that grade without prejudice.

5. In addition, exclusive of those reduced for cause, all officers who hold or have held USAF-Spot appointment in grade of Captain, Major, Lt. Col. or Colonel, wherever currently assigned, are eligible for consideration for USAF promotion to their current or former USAF-Spot grade.

Selection boards are expected to meet soon after the first of the year.

Ultrasonic Bomb Trainer

Mather AFB, Sacramento, Calif., has received the first of a new type bombardier-navigator ultrasonic trainer to be delivered to any Air Force installation.

The new training machine, officially designated the AN/APQ-T2 ultrasonic trainer, is designed to help navigators and bombardiers become as familiar with potential enemy cities as their own home towns. It will enable navigators and bombardiers to fly missions under simulated flight conditions to any area in the world without leaving the ground.

Flying Training Air Force Officers at Waco, Tex., expect the machine to:

1. Greatly increase the skill of its bombardiers and navigators.
2. Increase the efficiency of the training period.
3. Release aircraft and personnel for other duties.
4. Save a large slice of the taxpayers' dollars by reducing the number of hours aircraft are used for instruction.

The outstanding feature of the trainer is its ability to set up a flight to an actual target by use of a terrain map. Radar waves are hurled through space with a speed that is almost 200,000 times greater than the speed at which ultrasonic waves are propelled in water. By submerging the miniature terrain map into a tank of water the ultrasonic radar set will produce the same instrument results as readings obtained by actually flying the desired route.

The trainer simulates flight instrument use, radar operation, enemy jamming, evasive action, and adverse weather. In fact, any flight condition to be encountered except getting hit by enemy fire can be demonstrated through the use of this machine. Except for the feeling of motion and engine noises, trainees experiences are the same as those of actual flight.

Navigators and bombardiers are briefed as to the target and flight course. Both sit in booths reproduced exactly as their aircraft and follow the flight on instruments similar to those used in combat type aircraft.

An instructor at another panel "takes the plane off" by turning instruments on his panel. The instructor literally pilots the aircraft, sets the rate of climb, altitude and wind conditions. The navigator sets the course and the bombardier takes over when over the target area.

Study at Civilian Schools

Enrollment in the USAF Institute of Technology's Civilian Institutions program reached an all-time high this month, with 2,644 Air Force students in attendance at more than 250 colleges, universities and hospitals throughout the U. S. and abroad.

Topping the registration ladder is the Language Training program which has 198 officers and 441 airmen students. Next is the Engineering and Sciences program with an enrollment of 401, followed by Meteorology, 383; Medical, 347; Management and Social Sciences, 156; and Industrial Training, 44.

Civilian Institutions Division is also monitoring the educational programs of 536 Category "C" students who have been granted a delay in call to active duty to complete graduate training. In addition, some 347 persons are registered for special short courses in such fields as Manpower Management, Preventive Medicine, Traffic Control, Language Refresher and Quality Control.

With the exception of the Language trainees and three officers who are studying nuclear physics, students in civilian institutions are doing work exclusively at the graduate level.

Fifteen officers are studying in six foreign countries—Germany, Spain, Canada, England, Switzerland and Italy. Special students are enrolled in each of the following institutions: Heidelberg University, Germany; University of Madrid, Spain; McGill University, Montreal, Canada; Oxford, England; and University College of North Staffordshire, England.

Category "C" Reservists are studying abroad in the University of Bologna, Italy; University of Cambridge, England; University of Rome, Italy; University of Zurich, Switzerland and McGill University.

Of the total enrolled in all courses, one per cent hold the rank of Colonel, 6.5 per cent are Lieutenant Colonels, 14.7 per cent are Majors, 21.3 per cent are Captains, 17.3 per cent are First Lieutenants and 39.2 per cent are Second Lieutenants. About three-fourths of the students are non-rated. Of the remainder, 22 per cent are rated pilots and 6.4 per cent hold other aeronautical ratings.

AF Reserve Month

The month of November has been proclaimed, "Air Force Reserve Month," by the Mayor of St. Louis, Missouri, in conjunction with the initial appearance of one of the seven Tenth Air Force Reserve Personnel Inventory Teams, which are currently covering the 13 state mid-west area.

Col. Norman W. Callow, Commanding Officer of Inventory Team #5, which initiated its project of interviewing some 4,000 Air Force Reservists in the St. Louis area on 3 Nov., stated that this was the first such proclamation for the Reserve Inventory in Tenth's area.

The routes taken by Tenth Air Force Inventory Teams will be many and varied, with the seven teams inventorying some 10,000 Reservists in Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois, Missouri, Minnesota and Kansas during November.

New C. G. for Second AF

He succeeds Maj. Gen. J. H. Atkinson, who has been named vice commander of the Alaskan Air Command.

"We strive to erect a wall of security for the free world behind which free institutions can live. That wall must be maintained until Communistic imperialism dies of its own inherent evils."—DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER.

Services Salute New C-in-C. The loyal support of the Armed Services and a readiness to carry out whatever policies and plans he determines upon await the President-elect of the United States. That this is so no one knows better than Dwight D. Eisenhower who has been a devoted and able member of the military forces all of his adult life and who has lived and been guided by its high traditions and sound precepts.

That a military career officer should be chosen President is unusual though not unprecedented. However, at this time when security is our greatest problem and so many of our other national questions from the budget and taxes to production and labor are intertwined with military matters, it is small wonder that the American people turned to one skilled in that field. They know, too, that in addition to his historic achievements in arms he also has demonstrated an enormous capacity to unify peoples in the attainment of great aims. Surely, there are fewer alliances in history to parallel that which General Eisenhower welded in his military command to win World War II in Europe, while his post-war work with the NATO forces has accomplished much more than its opponents anticipated. This ability to make dissident forces work together is one of our country's greatest needs today. He knows the Russians too, their aims and their capabilities, and is well aware of what is needed to restrain aggression.

General Eisenhower's thorough appreciation and understanding of the need for armed forces in being should quiet the fears aroused by the promised cut in expenditures. We cannot believe that, in the face of world conditions which he decries, he will lessen our state of readiness.

In view of his life-long familiarity with problems of morale and their relationship to efficiency, the Services can hope that General Eisenhower will speak out for the proposed pay readjustment act, for better housing and living conditions, and for improved retirement and survivor benefits. Of these matters, the Services probably will know soon, for General Eisenhower is a man accustomed to quick decisions and prompt action.

Though non-political historically and by inclination, the Services and their problems have suffered from political buffeting. They look now to their new Commander in Chief with confidence that he will protect their rightful prestige and give them the men and material to do their assigned tasks.

Progress in Housing. The improvement in dependent housing at naval installations, as reported this week by Under Secretary Whitehair, and the promise of further progress in the future, is good news to the country. Senator Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Tex.), chairman of the subcommittee to which the report was made, said that it "will be deeply appreciated by all Americans who wish to alleviate the hardships imposed upon those of our citizens who are called to the defense of our country." Senator Johnson commended the Navy for its prompt efforts to remedy the "deficiencies found by the Senate Preparedness Committee a year ago." The implication is clear that the subcommittee's discovery of poor housing conditions prodded the Navy into doing something about it.

The fact is, however, that neither the Navy nor any of the other Services, could do anything concrete without legislation and appropriations. A careful reading of Mr. Whitehair's report shows that the principal source of housing became available under the Defense Housing Act of 1 Sept. 1951, enacted just at the time the subcommittee was discovering the bad conditions. Stronger Federal Rent Control only became available under the act of 31 July 1951. Limited use of Federal funds to aid in construction of quarters with rents low enough for enlisted personnel was not authorized until 28 Sept. 1951. Funds for trailers and "dismountable" housing did not come until 5 June 1952. It is thus ap-

Best Qualified

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I am in hearty agreement with several recent letters to the Editor criticizing the selection of temporary colonels by the "best qualified" method. The use of this means of selection has apparently put a halt to many worthwhile military careers including my own. Here is my particular story.

I graduated from the Military Academy in the early thirties, ranking in the upper third of my class. Prior to the war I served at various posts in the ZI and overseas, including a tour of duty as an instructor at the Academy. During this period I received good efficiency reports and was promoted to First Lieutenant, Captain, Major and Lieutenant Colonel (1942) at the same time as my classmates. I graduated from Leavenworth and during the war commanded a battalion of artillery through three campaigns in the ETO, including the Normandy landings.

After the war I served as a staff officer in a Continental Army Headquarters (Commendation Ribbon), and also spent three months as a member of an Army Integration Board interviewing and evaluating candidates for Regular Army commissions. I then volunteered for overseas and spent some three years as the Deputy Chief of Staff of a major overseas command.

In 1950, I was promoted to the rank of permanent Lieutenant Colonel along with practically all of my classmates. However, later that same year when the class moved up to temporary colonel I and some twenty others were not considered to be "best qualified" and were not promoted. Among the twenty not promoted there are several officers who have been in some particular jam but most of these twenty are capable and experienced officers whose only sin is apparently a poor efficiency rating in some ten years of service as lieutenant colonels good enough to warrant their selection as permanent lieutenant colonels, but not good enough to warrant their selection as temporary colonels. That is cutting the line mighty thin!

Moreover in the two years since 1950, hundreds of officers with a later date of rank have been promoted or selected for promotion to temporary colonel and my group has been hopelessly submerged. On examining my efficiency reports I found that one rather mild criticism in an otherwise fine report had been underlined by the selection board and was evidently the basis for my misfortune. I have made a conscientious effort for two years now to correct this deficiency and my latest reports bear evidence that I have succeeded.

It seems that a promotion board re-examination of these early pass-overs would now be in order since two years have elapsed in which time many of these lieutenant colonels of long experience and service have no doubt overcome any shortcomings that previously influenced the original promotion board.

To a career officer the failure to parent that it was money and legislative authority that permitted some progress in naval housing and not an exposé of conditions about which the Service was already painfully aware. The valuable feature of the Preparedness Subcommittee report was not that it stimulated the Service to action but that it brought the facts to the attention of Congress and the public and resulted in enactment of a portion of the needed legislation.

The further fact is that the surface has been barely scratched in fulfilling the needs for dependent housing. Much more remains to be done and it will take much more money.

In August 1865 some family troubles induced him to come to America. In April 1866 he enlisted as a private in Co. B, 4th Cavalry. In the meantime, the death of his father occurred at "Pollok Castle," and a baronetcy devolved on the missing son. Advertisements were inserted in many newspapers describing his personal appearance, but months elapsed and nothing was heard of the young baronet. Finally, on the 25th of last May, a notice was published in the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL, and this reached him. True Story of a Clothes Hamper

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Soon after we retired, my wife purchased a clothes hamper which she christened "The Salvation Army Basket." Into it went our cast-off clothing. Every so often, she bundled up the contents and delivered them to the aforementioned organization.

Came a period during which fewer and fewer garments went into the basket, for when our clothes became cast off, they were no longer of use to any human being.

We are now in a third phase, in which my wife is digging back into the basket in search of articles she may salvage for our own use.

The moral of this tale is that I have filed away the address of our local Salvation Army against the time when we may have to ask them to reciprocate past favors.

GEO. J. RAWLINS,
CAPT., USA, RETD.

PENTAGON observers perceive a definite trend toward a reduced Army strength, certain to be reflected in the fiscal '54 budget, but already set in motion. Latest evidence is the issuance this week of a draft call for 48,000 men in January 1953.

Wide publicity was given to the fact that the call to Selective Service for 48,000 men was the highest since January of this year, but there is little question that Army's original manpower request was cut. Throughout the Spring and Summer months, it was reported repeatedly that draft calls of 50,000 or more would be needed in the Fall and Winter months to replace men completing active service tours.

Army officials have stated that draft calls of 50,000 men and higher would be possible within the budget limitations voted by Congress for the current fiscal year. The failure of any draft call to reach or exceed the 50,000 figure has reached speculation.

The best guess is that the Department of Defense, apparently operating on the assumption that there will be an end to the fighting in Korea before fiscal year '54 begins on 1 July, is cutting the Army's manpower requests to effect a gradual Army cut-back.

This means that unless draft calls are increased considerably for February, March, April, May and June, the Army is likely to end the fiscal year considerably below the strength of 1,550,000 for which funds are available. Then, a further reduction is foreseen for fiscal '54.

It is conceivable that some members of Congress may protest, as they have done in the past, if actual Army strength is appreciably below appropriated strength, although the stress on economy probably will be an overpowering factor.

What is known to be disturbing military leaders of all the Services, however, is the principle which is involved here, for efficient planning and utilization of manpower becomes greatly complicated when significant revisions are made in strength tables for which Congress has provided funds.

Operation LONGSTEP Underway

NAVAL and air forces of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's newest members, Turkey and Greece, are currently engaged, along with those of France, Italy, Britain, and the United States in their first joint maneuvers. This is Operation Longstep, employing a total of 170 warships of all categories and 500 airplanes under direction of Admiral Robert B. Carney, commander of General Ridgway's Southern Sector. The largest naval element involved is the U. S. Sixth Fleet under Vice Adm. John H. Cassady. The air operations are under control of Lt. Gen. David M. Schlatter, Admiral Carney's air commander.

One significant aspect of these exercises in the Eastern Mediterranean is as unmistakable as were certain phases of the recent Mainbrace activities off the Norwegian and Danish coasts. It lies in the proved readiness of NATO strength, in impressive size, to move up in easy carrier-plane range of Red territory. That has been evident in the Mediterranean ever since the Sixth Fleet moved in; it is more impressive with each of the occasional temporary increases in the Fleet's size, and with the joint exercises engaged in by our own vessels and those of our allies in the Mediterranean. Greece and Turkey now constitute a most important addition, not only by reason of their physical strength but even more by their geographic locations.

Ashore at Izmir (more familiar to most of us as Smyrna) Lt. Gen. Willard G. Wyman has made a modest start with his Southeast Land Forces Command, now consisting of 18 officers and 60 other ranks, with his forward command-post across the straits in Salonika. Both places were on the week's visiting-list of General Ridgway, who left SHAPE last Monday for an inspection trip which would give him a glimpse of the new headquarters, and also of Exercise Longstep. General Ridgway's official party this time included a French and a Norwegian staff officer, as well as those from Greece and Turkey, welcome evidence that in this as in other SHAPE activities there is a strong international mixture.

Without waiting for the 15 December meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization Council, when 1953 objectives and allotments for all 14 members are to be determined, France has notified Secretary General Ismay that she will not be able in 1953 to go beyond the 1952 target of 12 divisions. That 1952 figure, pledged at the Lisbon meeting last January, will be fully attained late next month as promised; it presumably will thereafter be maintained, with the force improving qualitatively under continued training, but no more units are in sight. At one time three additional French divisions had been projected for 1953. Paris is unquestionably disappointed that next year's anticipated American aid of $650,000,000 is reduced to $525,000,000. The 12-division verdict is not unexpected, but it reminds us anew that not much in the way of larger defense forces in the West can be expected at the NATO Council meeting in mid-December.

The long drawn-out negotiations with Spain for air and naval bases in that strategically located country are at last attaining much-desired results, and apparently on terms satisfactory to both nations. The important thing is that there will be three major and several minor air bases for American and Spanish military use, also conversion of Cadiz harbor (just outside Gibraltar) into an efficient naval base, with important improvements to Cartagena (on the Mediterranean side). Of the three projected air bases only one is identified in the first announcement; this, naturally, is Barajas, an excellent location just southeast of Madrid, on the lofty central plateau which provides easy approaches from all directions, through air which is phenomenally clear most of the year. It will need relatively little development work, and its choice was inevitable. The other major bases are not fully settled on, but one apparently will be as near the extreme north and the other as near the extreme south as the peninsula's mountain structure permits.

It will be recalled that Congress' somewhat impetuous tender last spring of $125,000,000 in economic aid for Spain had the unhappy result of convincing Madrid that American negotiators would eagerly meet all demands. It became necessary for the American mission to settle back and let Madrid find that, useful as the bases would be, they were not indispensable, and there were limits to what America could and would give for them, in cash, materials or terms of diplomatic or military alliance. This allowed Madrid time to examine its own uneasy economic position, and thereby to discover that the original American suggestions possessed impressive virtues from Spain's viewpoint. In the greater calm which now obtains there is likelihood of a final compact which will provide benefits for both nations, and in balance.

The $125,000,000 referred to will not be enough for the job ahead, but more can be made available from Congress' $2,000,000,000 general appropriation for foreign bases. There still is need for agreement on work-control, Spain desiring, naturally enough, to arrange for employment of a maximum of Spaniards, and the United States with equal earnestness insisting upon use of American engineers and technical workers, including those with recent experience in the better aspects of airfield construction in France and French Morocco. There already seems to be something close to agreement on post-completion operations, which presumably will allow for an over-all Spanish direction, with tight American command arrangements at each base.

Early next month the Royal Air Force will receive the first in a long-continuing chain of 350 or more F-86Es to replace the present Vampire and Meteor types and permit the considerable upbuilding (Please turn to Page 307)

President-Elect to Study Korean Scene

PRESIDENT Truman and President-elect Dwight D. Eisenhower will confer at the White House during the week of 17 November on matters pertaining to the international relations of the United States. This meeting, in the words of President Truman, will convince the world that "this nation is united in its struggle for freedom and peace." The President-elect said that he plans to name representatives to confer with heads of some of the Government departments, relative to an orderly transition of administrative functions. Previously he accepted an invitation of the President to name an adviser to meet with the Director of the Budget in connection with estimates of Government expenditures for the coming fiscal year, which must be presented to the Congress not later than 18 Jan. 1953, two days prior to the inauguration of the new President. Presumably General Eisenhower will also select representatives to serve with the State and Defense departments during the transition period.

President-elect Eisenhower is expected to leave soon for Korea to inspect the fighting front, to ascertain details of the stalled armistice conference, and to learn the progress being made in training and equipping additional South Korean troops for combat service. During the closing days of the campaign General Eisenhower announced that he planned to make an early trip to Korea to secure first-hand information on developments in the battle area. He told the President that he would arrange the details of the trip with the Secretary of Defense, which may be made late this month.

DELEGATES TO THE U. N. GENERAL ASSEMBLY, particularly those representing countries closely associated with the United States through regional agreements or similarity of interests, are eager for some authoritative announcement of the President-elect on the future course of this country in international affairs. The present meeting of the General Assembly in New York is due to adjourn on 20 Dec., a month before the new President is inaugurated. During the period prior to adjournment the Assembly has scheduled action on several important issues, among them the Korean War and disputes over colonial administration. Western European countries, particularly Great Britain and France, would like early information as to the policies of the new American administration with respect to aid in European re-armament, and development of a continental defense force.

It has been the position of the United States delegation at the United Nations that questions now before the General Assembly were not an issue in the American election. Presumably no major alteration in American foreign policy is in immediate prospect, though numerous suggestions for changes in method, resulting from a fresh approach, were advanced during the campaign. Nevertheless, an early pronouncement by the President-elect, and possibly the designation of a coordinator to serve officially or unofficially with the American delegation would be regarded as helpful.

In the meantime the Korean War remains the principal, and almost the only topic under discussion by the Political Committee of the General Assembly. Mexico this week formally presented a proposal to secure agreement on the war prisoner issue, which is blocking negotiations for a Korean armistice. Under this proposal, drafted by retiring President Miguel Aleman in conformance with previous suggestions advanced by his country, would permit liberated Red prisoners, who did not wish to return to Communist control, to go to any country of their selection which is a member of the United Nations, but not an active participant in the war. Opportunities for employment would be provided, with the understanding that the freed prisoners would return to their own countries when normal conditions were restored.

While this formula might provide a means for the Communists to reverse their previous attitude of demanding forced prisoner-of-war repatriation it has been made abundantly clear that the Reds will have none of it. When the plan was first presented by Mexico to Secretary-General Trygve Lie last September it was roundly denounced by Red propaganda, and Communist spokesmen have insisted that they will accept nothing less than the forced return of all captives held by the Allies, regardless of their personal wishes. Arab and Asian delegates to the United Nations have been conferring this week, concerning a compromise plan which would merge the Soviet proposal for a United Nations commission to attempt to settle the Korean question, and a new suggestion covering prisoner repatriation. They hope that a solution acceptable to both sides may be developed.

FOREIGN MINISTER Y. T. PYUN of the Republic of Korea, addressing the Political Committee of the United Nations, this week declared that his government never would give up its legitimate intentions of recovering its lost territory, so long as "one inch of North Korea remains in the hands of the Communist traitors and the Chinese Communist invaders." He said that South Korea had been prevented from launching an offensive before the Red invasion by the refusal of the United States to supply heavy artillery and war planes, because of fear of starting a third world war. In the opinion of western diplomats the Korean minister's rather bellicose speech did nothing to promote an accord on the question of bringing an early end to the conflict.

The Russian government sent a sharp note this week to the State Department, protesting against an order of the Far East Command establishing a sea defense zone in South Korean waters to eliminate infiltration of enemy agents into war prison camps, to prevent attacks on South Korean coasts, to protect United Nations lines of communications, and to halt smuggling. The Soviet note charges that this blockade is illegal, and warns that the United States must take "responsibility for consequences." The Russians in July 1950 made a similar protest against the sea blockade, and calls the recent action of the Far Eastern Commander an extension of an illegal blockade and a "new aggressive act."

In Indo-China the thrust of the Viet-Minh Communist rebels against French and native troops has apparently collapsed. The Red offensive had carried deep into loyal territory, but heavy losses and lengthening lines of communications in rugged country forced a withdrawal. French and native troops countered with an offensive reconnaissance that met only light resistance. They entered the undefended town of Phutho, captured by the Reds three weeks ago, and found it abandoned and in ruins. In their ill-starred offensive the Viet-Minh rebels are estimated to have lost 3,000 in killed and wounded, while French and native casualties are placed at 920.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Sen. Symington May Have Familiar Role—Senator-elect W. Stuart Symington (D-Mo.) may find himself in a familiar role on Capitol Hill next year—arguing strongly for Air Force funds.

As Secretary of the Air Force, Mr. Symington repeatedly and emphatically urged the Armed Services Committees and the Appropriations Committees of the Senate and House to vote money for expanding the Air Force. At times, his strong presentations were not in accord with announced White House and Department of Defense budget policy, but at all levels of Government Secretary Symington won praise for his forthright stand.

As a Senator, he can surely be expected to lead the fight for necessary military funds, particularly as regards the Air Force whose needs he knows so well.

Mr. Symington's election comes at a time when there are recurring reports that the fiscal year 1954 budget, when it reaches Congress, will be cut by billions of dollars from current appropriations. It has been speculated that in the tentative '54 budget estimates, the Air Force will be given about $19 billion and about $10 or $11 billion each for the Army and Navy. The estimates for fiscal year '53 were $51.9 billion and $46.9 billion was voted. There are certain to be strong efforts made in Congress next year to cut military funds by a much-discussed $10 billion.

If such budget slashes are attempted, Mr. Symington, no less as a Senator than as Air Force Secretary, can be counted on to oppose action jeopardizing national security.

Another Air Force enthusiast was elected to the Senate. He is Senator-elect Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.), who defeated Senator Ernest W. McFarland (D-Ariz.), the majority leader. Mr. Goldwater, a pilot in World War II, is chief of staff of the Arizona Air National Guard.

Marine Corps Birthday—From the halls of Arlington to the shores of Korea and the fighting front, the Marine Corps will celebrate its 177th birthday on Monday, 10 Nov. As in the past, Marines in the line are expected to note the occasion by ripping into the enemy ranks with added ferocity wherever the opportunity permits. In addition, they will be provided with a special meal to mark the celebration. Turkey dinners with all the trimmings will be served to members of the Corps in Korea. Those in the front lines will be reached wherever possible by helicopter or pack transport.

Although the day will not be a holiday for the Corps, Marines at shore bases in the states and abroad will gather at evening celebrations to participate in social observances. In most areas these gala meetings will be climaxed by traditional cake-cutting ceremonies.

In Washington, D. C., Marines will celebrate with a Birthday Ball in the Sail Loft of the Naval Gun Factory, where General Lemuel C. Shepherd, Jr., Commandant of the Corps, will cut a giant birthday cake. Most of the Corps' top officers in the Washington area will attend, as will a large number of distinguished guests.

Among those who have been invited are: Secretary of Defense and Mrs. Robert A. Lovett, Secretary of the Air Force and Mrs. Thomas K. Finletter, Secretary of the Navy Dan A. Kimball, the Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. William F. Fechteler, Under Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Francis P. Whitehair, Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. John F. Floborg, Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Herbert B. Askins.

Also Deputy Secretary of Defense and Mrs. William C. Foster, Assistant Secretary of Defense and Mrs. Charles A. Coolidge, President of the Navy League and Mrs. Frank Hecht, Lt. Gen. and Mrs. Julian C. Smith, USMC-Ret., Rear Adm. and Mrs. T. B. Hill, Rear Adm. and Mrs. M. L. Royar, Rear Adm. and Mrs. H. I. Pugh, Rear Adm. and Mrs. Arleigh Burke, Rear Adm. and Mrs. T. S. Combs, and Rear Adm. and Mrs. G. H. Fort, among a long list of guests.

No Retention Boards For Flag Officers—The Navy said this week that its retention boards "have completed all their deliberations for the fiscal year 1953 for all flag officers of the Navy." The announcement followed publication of a JOURNAL article which stated that a large number of senior flag officers would be considered for retention by a board scheduled to meet this month. Different points of reference used by Navy spokesmen and THE JOURNAL resulted in publication of the story.

All of the officers listed in THE JOURNAL article "have already been considered for retention on active duty as prescribed by the Officer Personnel Act of 1947," according to the Bureau of Naval Personnel. The Bureau noted that "none of the named officers will again be considered by this type of board."

Although both Marine generals and Navy Staff Corps flag officers are eligible for consideration on a year-to-year basis once they have been selected by a retention board, the same does not hold true for unrestricted flag officers of the Line. The latter group are required by law to be considered only once by such a board.

Pioneer Medical Course—Doctors of the Armed Forces, the Reserve and National Guard will be brought abreast of the newest developments in general and military medicine during a five-day symposium to be held at Brooke Army Hospital, Tex., 8-12 Dec. The symposium, part of the short course post-graduate program sponsored by the Army Surgeon General, will be under the direction of Brig. Gen. Martin E. Griffin, commanding general of Brooke Army Hospital.

This will be the first course sponsored by the Surgeon General that will integrate the medical specialties and their sub-sections in one comprehensive program. As such, it will be the pilot course for similar ones to be held once each quarter at one of the Army's four largest teaching hospitals. Similar courses are planned for 1953 at Walter Reed, Letterman and Fitzsimons as well as Brooke Army Hospital.

Eligible to attend the symposium at Brooke Army Medical Center are medical officers on active duty and those in the Armed Forces Reserves, the National Guard and from other departments of the Armed Forces.

Seventh Army Post—Col. Earl C. Bergquist has been assigned to Seventh Army Headquarters at Vaihingen, Germany, as Assistant Chief of Staff, G-3. He succeeds Col. Raymond E. Bell, who has been assigned to Staff and Faculty of the Army War College. Prior to his new assignment Colonel Bergquist commanded the 8th Infantry Regiment of the 4th Infantry Division. He was Chief of Staff of the 94th Infantry Division during World War II in the European Theater.

MEMO

To Journal Readers

...Defense officials reportedly are not greatly concerned over the up-coming switch in chairmanships of the Armed Services Committees. During recent years, both Committees have kept POLITICS TO A MINIMUM, have concentrated almost exclusively on a "what's good for National Defense" approach. Fortunately, professional staff members, recognized as some of the best on Capitol Hill, will continue. However, on the basis of PAST PERFORMANCE, serious difficulties are foreseen with the Appropriations Committees, particularly in the House, where Representative John Taber (R-NY) will be chairman. Fears are expressed that the final budget will be $10 billion less than current appropriations; it would mean a cut to about $37 billion.

...Maj. Gen. Howard M. Snyder, MC, USA-Ret., is expected to be named WHITE HOUSE PHYSICIAN when Gen. Eisenhower takes office. Retired for age on 1 March 1945, he was kept on active duty for service in the "Advisory Group of the Chief of Staff" and, after reverting to retired status in June 1948, was recalled to ACTIVE DUTY in Jan. 1951 and assigned to SHAPE. When the President-elect returned to the U.S., so did Gen. Snyder.

...Another member of Gen. Eisenhower's NATO staff likely to be given a WHITE HOUSE assignment is Maj. Gen. Wilton B. Persons—also called from retirement to serve at SHAPE. Well-known on Capitol Hill as a result of legislative liaison duty while in service, Gen. Persons may be made an ADMINISTRATIVE ASSISTANT to the President.

...Only two of the three senior White House aides will be given NEW ASSIGNMENTS. Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughn, military aide, has asked to revert to inactive status. He will become eligible for RETIREMENT BENEFITS upon reaching the age of 60 on 26 Nov. 1953. Rear Adm. Robert L. Dennison, Naval aide, and Maj. Gen. Robert B. Landry, Air Force aide, will be given new duties.

...Gen. Eisenhower's statement during the campaign that a civilian commission should be named to study the over-all scheme of NATIONAL SECURITY, including utilization of manpower, could have an effect on the Sarnoff Commission, which will examine the manpower problem.By Inauguration time, however, the Sarnoff group already should have completed some of its investigations. During WW II, it is noteworthy, Brig. Gen. David Sarnoff was SPECIAL CONSULTANT on communications to Gen. Eisenhower in Europe.

Retirement Ceremony for Gen. Pick—Retirement ceremonies will be held 18 Nov. at Ft. Belvoir, Va., for Lt. Gen. Lewis A. Pick, Chief of Army Engineers, who will reach the statutory retirement age of 62 on that date. He will retire effective 30 Nov.

Last week's issue of THE JOURNAL predicted the appointment by the President of Maj. Gen. Samuel D. Sturgis, Jr., as the new Chief of Engineers.

During his tour as Chief of Engineers, General Pick has directed the expenditure of more than $5,000,000,000 for Army and Air Force construction, and a nationwide program of flood control and rivers and harbors improvement and maintenance.

"Young" Marines Promoted—Four "young" second lieutenants of the Marine Corps traded their gold bars for silver ones recently in ceremonies at the Marine Corps Depot of Supplies, San Francisco. The four, with combined service in the Corps of 83 years, six months and 18 days, are: Arthur J. Davidson, 44; David E. Edwards, 42; Dean R. Hansberry, 36, and Harold C. Miller, 39. Their new appointments were presented to the officers by Brig. Gen. Raymond A. Anderson, CG of the Depot.

Fleet Adm. King's Biography—Publication is scheduled 21 Nov. for "Fleet Admiral King A Naval Record," the story of Fleet Admiral Ernest J. King, USN. The book is written by Admiral King and Comdr. Walter Muir Whitehill, USNR.

Obituary

Danish Admiral's Son Killed

Cpl. Niels Iver Qvistgaard, USMC, only son of Admiral Erhard J. C. Qvistgaard, Chief of Danish defenses, has been killed in action in Korea.

Admiral and Mrs. Qvistgaard were notified that their son died 26 Oct. while serving with the 7th Marine Regiment. He arrived in Korea last July.

Corporal Qvistgaard served with the Danish forces and spent three years in the British Army before coming to the United States. He joined the California National Guard in June, 1950, and was discharged in December, 1950, to enlist in the Marine Corps for three years. He obtained a waiver from the Secretary of the Navy to join because he was not a United States citizen. The same lack prevented him from receiving a commission in the Marine Corps.

He underwent basic training at San Diego, then was assigned to the 2d Amphibious Reconnaissance Battalion at Camp Lejeune, N. C., before going overseas.

ability to withstand the shock and vibration incident to the firing of a ship's own guns. As a result of this test work, Experiment Station engineers frequently recommend changes in design and materials.

The Mechanical Laboratory tests items such as pumps, refrigeration equipment, evaporators, air compressors and other shipboard mechanical gear for serviceability at sea. When performance is not up to par, the laboratorians determine the cause of the trouble and recommend remedial measures.

This laboratory is also active in the gas turbine field. Currently under test is an experimental 36-foot landing craft powered by a newly developed gas turbine engine.

The Metallurgical Laboratory is investigating the elevated temperature behavior of various metals and alloys to satisfy the increasing demand of the naval service for materials which will withstand higher pressures and temperatures. The metallurgists also evaluate materials for gears, propulsion shafting, hulls, propellers and other service elements. Another of their functions is analysis of metal parts which fail in service.

The theory of fatigue and corrosion-fatigue of metals, which today is a basic design factor, was originated in this laboratory some years ago.

The laboratory's studies in the field of corrosion prevention have done much toward extending the life of naval machinery. In all its work, particular emphasis is placed on the conservation of critical materials as well as on improved performance.

Welding Branch

The Welding Branch of the Welding and Electrical Laboratory investigates ways and means of fabricating naval materiel by welding and brazing. It is currently developing welding and fabrication procedures for propulsion shafting and high-pressure high-temperature steam generation components and is investigating the weldability of high grade steels, titanium and overlay alloys. Development of methods for the application of metallizing is also underway. Metallizing plays an important part in repairing equipment which otherwise would have to be scrapped. Underwater cutting and welding methods developed by this Branch were used extensively during World War II in salvage and repair operations.

The Electrical Branch of the Laboratory is concerned with shipboard interior communications, rotating electrical equipment and regulating devices, and with the suppression of radio interference. Switchboard components, alarm bells, fire and vapor detecting devices, salinity indicators, speed logs, engine telegraphs and other indicating and monitoring devices are evaluated and modified where necessary for the safe and efficient operation of naval vessels. Instrument panel illumination is also being improved.

Chemical Engineering

The Chemical Engineering Laboratory deals with items such as packings and gaskets, thermal insulation, anti-freeze compounds and water treatments. Its work in the field of rust prevention proved invaluable in the "mothballing" of the Reserve Fleet. Current efforts are aimed at developing thin film rust preventives that can be removed easily and protective coatings to shield already rusted surfaces from further corrosion.

Investigating the potentialities of small size industrial gas generating plants for use in the Fleet and at advance bases is one of the laboratory's newest projects. Oxygen generating plants which proved satisfactory under test are currently being installed aboard aircraft carriers. The oxygen is used by high flying jet pilots, while the nitrogen by-product is used for purging gasoline lines. Great weight and space reduction is effected by the use of such plants which eliminate the carrying of large, heavy storage cylinders.

The Experiment Station is also active in the fuels and lubricants field and works closely with engine manufacturers and lubricating oil suppliers.

The constant change in design of propulsion equipment requires parallel developments in fuels and lubricants. The Station evaluates these developments from chemical analysis to testing in full scale equipment.

Lubricating Oils

High quality lubricating oils are being investigated to improve operation of submarine engines under snorkel conditions and to mitigate the effect of high sulphur content Diesel fuel. Tests of new fuels for marine gas turbines and new lubricants for the latest types of marine reduction gears are in progress. Studies to improve lubricating oils and fuel type starting aids for use in arctic regions are also underway.

Bearings research is another special project of the Experiment Station since every piece of rotating and reciprocating machinery ultimately depends on bearing performance.

The Experiment Station's laboratories are supported by several well-equipped shops and a modern instrument facility.

The Naval Engineering Experiment Station operates under the military control of the Severn River Naval Command and under the technical control of the Navy Department's Bureau of Ships. Its technical work is performed by civilian personnel. Naval officers serve in an administrative capacity and furnish essential guidance in the Navy's requirements from their first-hand contact with operating problems at sea.

In the modern laboratories of the Experiment Station, the most practical and effective engineering developments for our forces afloat are determined.

He called for more civilian counsel and direction in the weapons production program.

He stressed that "effective coordination of the Services in war requires central planning in time of peace." He said duplication and triplication in the Armed Forces must be ended.

Trng. Foxholes at Benning Have Built-In Bunks

Foxholes with built-in bunks are the latest training aids being constructed at Ft. Benning for Infantry School students.

Viewed from one side, the foxholes appear exactly as they would to an approaching enemy—but from the fourth side, Infantry School students can see right into the fortifications.

Before these foxholes were constructed, students could only peer at holes or stakes driven into the ground to represent foxholes. But the new training aids, built into the side of a defile, give students a clear, unobstructed view right into the heart of the combat fortifications.

Built under the direction of the Tactical Department's Engineer Committee and Defense Group, the training aids include regular two-man foxholes, rocket launcher positions, machinegun positions and bunkers.

Built From Scrap

The first group of foxholes to be completed were built by members of Ft. Benning's 598th Airborne Engineer Company from scrap and salvaged materials.

The full-sized fortifications were constructed to specifications contained in field manuals, with a few exceptions.

In Ft. Benning's Davis Hill area, the Defense Group is completing a built-up defensive area for a platoon position. Actual construction work on the bunkers is being performed by men from Ft. Benning's 78th Engineer Combat Battalion.

These fortifications are being constructed of logs, sandbags and old crates and will give students an accurate picture of a rifle platoon in a defensive position in combat. The positions are being built to actual size.

One of the outstanding features of the Davis Hill project is the tunnels connecting the bunkers and trenches. All positions will be completely camouflaged when completed.

Allen and Smith Fences

In addition to regular barbed wire fences found in a combat area, two other types of barbed wire also will be found on display in the Davis Hill area. These are the Allen and Smith fences.

The Allen fence is built outside the personnel area of the defensive positions and is chiefly used in combat to detonate tank artillery fire before it reaches friendly positions.

The Smith fence is used primarily as an anti-personnel measure and is placed directly in front of unit positions.

Combat veterans who have inspected the positions reported they were "quite similar" to those used in the Korean fighting.

Gen. Textor Retires

Brig. Gen. Gordon E. Textor, Assistant Chief of Engineers for Military Operations, was retired 31 Oct.

In addition to various assignments with the Corps of Engineers in military and civil works fields, General Textor was formerly Deputy Director of the Facilities Bureau, War Production Board; Deputy Administrator of the War Assets Administration; and personal assistant to the U. S. High Commissioner John J. McCloy in Germany.

General Textor, born in Kasota, Minn. on 9 June 1902, was graduated from the U. S. Military Academy, West Point, in 1924.

General and Mrs. Textor reside at 112 Van Winkle Drive, Falls Church, Va.

Third Ranking W. O. Retires

The Army's third ranking warrant officer, CWO-4 Anton Nelson, has retired after 35 years service, 33 of them with the Corps of Engineers. He was map reproduction officer at the Engineer Research and Development Laboratories just prior to his retirement.

However, the military tradition of the Nelson family will be carried on by CWO Nelson's daughter, Alice, who recently became a lieutenant in the Women's Medical Specialist Corps and is currently at Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

The retiring Engineer is looking forward to many happy fishing years at Clearwater, Fla., where he will make his home.

Gen. Young Heads US Group To Tripartite Inf. Meeting

Maj. Gen. Robert N. Young, Ft. Benning Infantry Center commander, heads the U. S. delegation to a Tripartite Infantry conference which opened in Quebec, Canada on 7 Nov.

Top military officials from the U. S., Britain and Canada are meeting at The Citadel in Quebec to review current developments of equipment, arrange standardization trials where developments are sufficiently advanced and exchange information regarding weapons and equipment.

Lt. Gen. Guy Simonds, chief of the Canadian Army's general staff opened the conference. Chairman will be Maj. Gen. H. A. Sparling, vice chief of the Canadian Army's general staff.

The delegates toured military installations, including the U. S. Infantry Center at Fort Benning, the United Kingdom School of Infantry in Warminster, England, and the Infantry Training Camp at Valcartier, Quebec, Canada, before the conference got under way. It is expected to last three or four days.

The British and Canadian delegations toured Ft. Benning 30 and 31 Oct. and witnessed a series of Infantry weapons demonstrations.

General Young and members of his staff accompanied the Allied group to England on 31 Oct. They flew to Quebec later this week for additional demonstrations staged by the Canadian Army prior to the conference.

The Canadian delegation is headed by Brig. John M. Rockingham, director general of military training and former commander of the 25th Canadian Infantry Brigade in Korea.

Maj. Gen. F. R. G. Mathews, British director of Infantry, heads the United Kingdom delegation.

Ft. Benning personnel accompanying General Young include Col. Gines Perez, Infantry Center G-3, Major D. J. Adams, The Infantry School's Weapons Department, and Col. H. E. Kelly, president, and Lt. Col. H. E. Miner and Capt. Q. L. McNary, all of Army Field Forces Board No. 3.

Col. W. S. Triplett, Lt. Col. E. S. Rickman, Marine Lt. Col. W. L. Flake, all of the Department of Army, and Col. Raymond A. Robbins, Lt. Col. F. S. Kelly and Lt. Col. H. D. Hansen, all of Army Field Forces headquarters, also will be in the contingent.

Four staff officers from the Office, Chief of Army Field Forces, Ft. Monroe, Va., will attend: Col. John P. Eckert, Research and Development Section; Col. Edwin B. Crabill, Research and Development Section; Col. Henry G. Fisher, Combat Arms Advisory Group; and Lt. Col. Francis S. Kelly, Combat Arms Advisory Group.

Arty. Center Seeks Acres

The Artillery Center at Ft. Sill, Okla., has requested 38,000 more acres for a firing range.

Requests for the additional areas, contained in two blocks, have been sent to the Department of Defense. The expansion would entail a 40 per cent increase in Sill range land, according to present boundaries.

The request for additional land is based on a survey which shows an increase in the number of students being trained at the Artillery Center, the number of units stationed at Ft. Sill and the increased range of artillery weapons now in use.

3d Inf. Div. C. G.

Maj. Gen. George W. Smythe recently replaced Maj. Gen. Robert I. Dulaney as commander of the 3d Infantry Division in Korea.

General Smythe comes to Korea after commanding the 24th Infantry Division in Japan. His arrival releases General Dulaney for a new assignment in the United States. General Dulaney took command of the 3d Division 29 April 1952. He served previously in Korea as assistant commander of the 45th Infantry Division.

Gen. Rawlings Warns On "Stop & Go" Procurement

An Air Force pledge to help protect industry against the pitfalls of "stop and go" military buying was made recently before more than 200 members of the National Security Industrial Association (NSIA) meeting at Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio.

Lt. Gen. Edwin W. Rawlings, USAF, commanding general of the Air Materiel Command, coupled his promise with a plea to industry not to "take a seat in the stands" after the Air Force's projected buildup for 1955 gets into high gear.

Lt. Gen. Rawlings

General Rawlings called on defense producers to remember that "our projected 143-wing strength represents a level of security which will require the continued support of both the Air Force and industry over the years."

"The best insurance for adequate defense production is a solidly based, healthy peacetime industry," General Rawlings declared. He asked industry's help in establishing a realistic program to "give us what we need without building peaks into our production resources which cannot be absorbed back into the normal civilian economy."

Listing Air Force steps designed to protect industry from a "feast or famine" existence, he pointed to the stretchout in aircraft production which will keep industry on a more even keel by offering steadier production jobs over longer periods of time.

General Rawlings also outlined programs currently underway to set up "dual purpose plants" where civilian and military production can proceed side by side.

Referring to what he called the "capital gains of the industry-Air Force partnership," General Rawlings said that by expanding our defense production we are creating a stockpile of knowledge and experience that can also enrich civilian life. He pointed specifically to the heavy press program and the development of titanium and other "so-called miracle metals."

"The heavy press program represents a multi-million dollar investment which could revolutionize much of our mass production," he said. "The people are entitled to the fullest possible return on their defense dollars in terms of more civilian products for better living when our priority defense needs have been met," the general declared.

First Flight by Navy's Swept-Wing Twin-Jet A3D

Successful first flight of the Navy's first swept-wing twin-jet attack aircraft, the Douglas A3D, was announced this week by the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics.

Rated as the most powerful airplane ever designed for carrier operation, the A3D was guided on its maiden flight by veteran Douglas pilot, George Jensen. Jensen took the twin-jet attack plane aloft easily from a runway at Edwards Air Force Base, Muroc, Calif., on 28 Oct. After a smooth thirty minute flight Jensen said the A3D performed to "all expectations."

Designed at Douglas El Segundo (Calif.) Division, the A3D manufacturers assert that it will fly faster, over longer distances with a greater striking load than any other known airplane of comparable size now in service, or contemplated for early service. It can be used as a high altitude, high-speed attack plane, or at low level for mine laying, it is stated, and it can be adapted aboard its carrier for photo reconnaissance.

Built to perform in the 600 to 700 mile per hour class, the A3D can fly at altitudes above 40,000 feet on its combat missions.

Designed with an internal bomb-bay, the A3D is rated as able to carry the largest type bombs, torpedoes or other munitions the Navy is expected to utilize in striking actions from carriers.

High-wing design of the Douglas-built craft accommodates underwing jet engine pods. Both the wing and the tail fold for compact handling and storage aboard carriers.

Pressurized cabin accommodates a crew of three—pilot, pilot-bombardier and gunner-navigator. Each can operate any position when necessary.

A simple slide-type escape chute like that used on the Navy's F3D Skyknight twin-jet fighter is incorporated into the A3D. An upper ditching hatch is provided.

Douglas designed speed brakes successfully introduced on the Navy's AD Skyraider attack-bomber are again utilized on the A3D, officials stated. The dive brakes open out from the sides hydraulically to facilitate rapid descent without an excessive build-up in speed.

According to Rear Adm. T. S. Combs, Chief of the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics, "The A3D is a significant advancement on the Navy's program of jet modernization of the Fleet. It will extend the striking range of our carriers beyond any point hitherto attained to carry out unescorted attacks against defended enemy submarine bases and harbor installations."

E. H. Heinemann, El Segundo Douglas Engineering Chief who directed design of the advance attack bomber said, "Though it is the Navy's largest bomber, the A3D is small and light in proportion to the missions it will accomplish. It is a result of the trend started by the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics and Douglas Company of de-complicating combat planes."

Former Navy Pilot To Ad Post

Appointment of James W. Johnson as manager of the Detroit office of Young & Rubicam, Inc., is announced by Sigurd S. Larmon, president of the advertising agency.

A year before Pearl Harbor, Mr. Johnson had a reserve commission and went into the Navy, rising in the subsequent four and a half years to lieutenant commander. He was an instructor at naval air stations in Pensacola, Fla., and Grosse Ile, Detroit. He was an operations officer at the Naval Air Station in Seattle, Wash., and chief test pilot at the Naval Air Station in Norfolk, Va. For 20 months, he served aboard the carrier, USS Saratoga.

Sabre Jets to RAF

Under arrangements made between authorities of the United States, Canada, and the United Kingdom, the Royal Air Force is to receive between 300 and 400 F-86E Sabre aircraft.

Engines, electronic equipment, and instruments are being furnished by the United States through the Mutual Defense Assistance Program. Air frames are being furnished by Canada, and the aircraft are being assembled there under Canadian mutual aid arrangements.

Main delivery of the aircraft to the Royal Air Force will begin in December, and it is expected to be completed during 1953. Under agreed arrangements, aircraft will be employed in the 2d Allied Tactical Air Force under the command of Air Marshal Sir Robert Foster, and will form an important part of the RAF contribution to General's Ridgway's forces, some of them replacing less modern aircraft in existing squadrons, and others going to form new squadrons.

Col. Howland Sales Manager

Creation of a new position, that of commercial sales manager, and appointment of Col. John R. Howland to fill it, has been announced by E. G. Fossum, general manager of Stewart-Warner Corporation.

Colonel Howland will direct two types of commercial sales of products developed in the Stewart-Warner Electric Division's electronic laboratories, Mr. Fossum said. One is that of customer products, or those having a consumer end-use, while the other is that of electronic components to other manufacturers. Colonel Howland has been director of product research for the Corporation for the past two years. A graduate of Annapolis, Colonel Howland served in the Army in World War II. He was chief of the Signal Corps Resources Branch in Washington; Signal Officer of the United Kingdom Base, and executive to the Chief Signal Officer of the European Theater.

Adm. Cooley Joins Firm

Vice Adm. T. R. Cooley, who retired from the Navy this year, has accepted the position of Assistant to the President of the C. J. Hendry Company. This company is a major distributor of marine, fishing, boating, aircraft, and industrial supplies in San Francisco, San Pedro, and San Diego.

Admiral Cooley served in both the Atlantic and Pacific during World War II, was commander of the battleship USS Washington, and she was his flagship when he was ordered to duty as Commander Battleship Division Six. This was during the now-famous actions around Tinian, Saipan, Guam, Palau, Luzon, Leyte Gulf, the South China Sea, and on to Iwo Jima, Okinawa, and Japan. He later commanded all battleships and cruisers in the Atlantic, then organized and commanded the Fourth Fleet.

Third MarDiv Review

Four top Marine generals, including the Commandant of the Marine Corps, reviewed the striking power of the Third Marine Division this week as units of the division participated in an air-ground combat review at Camp Pendleton, Calif.

General Lemuel C. Shepherd, jr., formally presented the colors to the new Division and to the Ninth Marine Regiment, which he commanded in World War II. Maj. Gen. Robert H. Pepper is Commander of the Third Division.

Maj. Gen. Samuel L. Howard, Inspector General of the Marine Corps, presented the colors to the recently reactivated Fourth Marine Regiment, which he commanded in China and on Corregidor.

Maj. Gen. James A. Stuart, Deputy Commander and Chief of Staff of Camp Pendleton, presented colors to the Third Marine Regiment, which he commanded during the fight for Guam.

Colors of the 12th Marine Regiment were presented by Mrs. J. B. Wilson, widow of the late Brig. Gen. John B. Wilson, who activated the unit at Pendleton in 1942.

The review culminated a schedule of combat training that began with the Division's activation last January, and progressed through months of field maneuvers, amphibious assaults, helicopter landings, and various other types of training, including participation in a special atomic warfare exercise.

All units of the Division marched in the review. Aircraft were provided by the Marine Corps Air Station, El Toro, Calif.

Enlisted Psywar Class

Twenty-three enlisted men began studies at Ft. Bragg, N. C., this week in the first psychological warfare enlisted course offered by the Army's Psychological Warfare School since it was transferred to Ft. Bragg earlier this year. It is also the first six weeks enlisted course.

Col. Gordon Singles, Assistant Commandant of the Psywar School, who officially welcomed the new students, emphasized that during the course the students would be taught how to prepare propaganda and how to get it out to its target audience.

Although the course is the first at Ft. Bragg, it is actually the third enlisted class as two previous courses were given for enlisted men under the Army General School at Ft. Riley, Kans. The present course which began 4 Nov., is scheduled to end on 18 Dec.

During the six weeks, enlisted students will study the latest psychological warfare techniques and doctrines currently being employed in Korea and elsewhere. Special classes and field demonstrations will be put on by psychological warfare field units stationed at the Center.

The Psywar School, the only one of its type in the nation's armed services, is designed to instruct selected officers and enlisted men of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines, and a few selected individuals of other United States government agencies and Allied governments. They are trained to be specialists in propaganda, public opinion, and in the conduct of sustained psychological operations.

New "By-Pass" Jet

A new type of air engine has been revealed by the partial removal from Britain's Secret List of the Rolls Royce Conway. It operates on what is known as the "by-pass system" and is believed to be the first large air-engine in which the system has been applied. Performance details remain secret.

In a conventional jet engine the whole of the air is compressed and then heated by the admission of burning fuel, expanded through the turbine and finally ejected at high velocity. In a by-pass engine only a proportion of the air is compressed and heated. The remainder bypasses the combustion system and turbine, and rejoins the heated gases in the jet pipe to mix with them and lower their temperature before the whole mixture is ejected.

This is reported to give a higher propulsive efficiency, and cause a lower fuel consumption for any given thrust.

XB-52 To USAF For Tests

The XB-52 Stratofortress, second of the eight-jet heavy bombers to fly, was turned over to the Air Force on 30 Oct. for flight test and evaluation program. Since its first flight on 2 Oct., a mixed crew, composed of both Boeing and Air Force pilots, has flown the bomber.

The XB-52 was flown on last week's acceptance flight by Lt. Col. Guy M. Townsend, pilot, and Capt. William Magruder, co-pilot, of the USAF Air Research and Development Command. Air Force tests on the XB-52 and Boeing tests on the YB-52 will continue from Seattle's Boeing Field.

New President's Problems

eral Eisenhower may want to hold in Pentagon service a member of the current team. If this is so, the most likely hold-over would be W. J. McNeill, Assistant Secretary of Defense (Comptroller), the budget expert, who has served in this post since 3 Sept. 1949—longest tenure of any Secretary or Assistant Secretary in the Department of Defense.

Although the fiscal '54 budget will be submitted by President Truman, there is another budget which will be the complete responsibility of General Eisenhower's administration. This is the much-discussed supplemental budget to cover costs of fighting in Korea. The fiscal '53 budget was formulated on the planning assumption that there would be no war in Korea after 1 July 1952. The Department of Defense also has had to find funds within the current budget for mustering-out pay, combat pay and the cost-of-living pay increase and officials have said repeatedly supplemental funds will be needed to cover these costs.

The fiscal '54 budget, now rumored to be about $39 or $40 billion and said to result in decreased strength for the Army and Air Force, is not the only legislative matter to receive prompt consideration by General Eisenhower. There is, of course, the entire Department of Defense legislative program, which has been sent to Capitol Hill in tentative form, but which is certain to have further review in the next few months.

This legislative program, as now formulated, does not include a bill for Universal Military Training and there is slim chance that such a measure will be strongly advocated in the 83d Congress, although General Eisenhower has, in the past, spoken in favor of some form of UMT.

Not formally included in the legislative program, but strongly supported by Secretary of Defense Lovett and Assistant Secretary Anna M. Rosenberg is a measure to adjust military pay to keep pace with the cost of living.

During his campaign, General Eisenhower emphasized that military pay must be kept in line with living costs.

However, the great stress placed on economy during the campaign would indicate that pay relief for those in Service must be seen now as less than a 50-50 prospect.

Many personnel bills, including Reserve Officer Promotion, Survivor Benefits, and Equalization of Benefits acts, are slated for transmittal to Capitol Hill early next year. At the White House, these and other personnel bills will likely receive more than routine Presidential consideration.

In addition to legislation affecting great numbers of military personnel, General Eisenhower will be involved quickly in the designation of specific personalities for top jobs.

A former Army Chief of Staff, General Eisenhower by 16 Aug. 1953 must name a successor to General J. Lawton Collins, who now holds this post. General Collins could be retained as Chief of Staff, but this is not considered likely. It could very well be that General Collins will be given another important assignment after his tour as Chief of Staff ends, for he will be only 57 years of age at that time.

General Eisenhower must also make a decision concerning the successor to another former Army Chief of Staff, General of the Army Omar N. Bradley, who on 16 Aug. completes a second tour as Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and who under existing law, cannot be reappointed unless the nation is at war.

Speculation already is growing as to whom General Eisenhower will name as JCS Chairman. If the job is rotated among the Services, the likely candidate is Admiral William M. Fechteler, Chief of Naval Operations. In event of Admiral Fechteler's appointment to this post, a new CNO would have to be chosen, possibly Admiral Robert B. Carney.

But even before action is taken on a new Army Chief of Staff, a new JCS Chairman and possibly a new CNO, General Eisenhower must decide upon a successor to General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, USAF Chief of Staff, whose extended tour of duty ends on 30 June.

General Lauris Norstad, Commanding

General of U. S. Air Forces in Europe, although he will be only 46 years of age on 24 March 1953, is seen as a strong possibility for the post of Air Force Chief of Staff. General Nathan F. Twining, present Vice Chief of Staff, is slated to retire in November 1953, but he could be retained on active duty.

General Curtis E. LeMay, Commanding General, Strategic Air Command, was nominated and confirmed by the Senate for a switch of assignment with General Twining, but this move has been cancelled. General LeMay is due for reassignment, having been SAC commander since November 1948.

Among other Air Force officers who are certain to receive consideration as General Vandenberg's successor are Lt. Gen. Thomas D. White, DCS, Operations, and Lt. Gen. Laurence S. Kuter, DSC, Personnel.

Just as General Norstad is prominently mentioned as the next Air Force Chief of Staff because of his service under General Eisenhower in NATO, so also is General Alfred M. Gruenther a strong candidate for new assignment as Army Chief of Staff.

If seniority should be a decisive factor, however, General Gruenther, who will be only 54 years of age next March, is less likely a choice than either General Mark W. Clark, Far East Commander, or General Matthew B. Ridgway, who succeeded General Eisenhower as NATO Commander after serving as Far East Commander.

General Clark is second in seniority only to General Thomas T. Handy, Army commander in Europe, who will be 61 years of age on 11 March 1953. General Clark, who will be 57 years of age on 1 May 1953, has been a four-star officer since 10 March 1945.

General Ridgway, who will be 58 years of age on 3 March 1953, has held four-star rank since 11 May 1951.

Because of the age factor, if General Clark and General Ridgway are not named Chief of Staff next year, their chances of ever holding this post are over.

General Clark will meet the President-elect when General Eisenhower travels to the Far East for an on-the-spot inspection of the situation in Korea. Another officer whom General Eisenhower will visit on this trip is General James A. Van Fleet, Commanding General, Eighth Army.

General Van Fleet's letter regarding training of Republic of Korea troops was made an issue in the recent political campaign. The Eighth Army Commander, on the basis of 35 years service, 5 years in permanent grade and attainment of the age of 60, is due for retirement in January. But there is much speculation now that he will be retained on active duty beyond the date when he normally would be expected to retire. There is a provision in the Officer Personnel Act permitting such retention.

The personalities whom General Eisenhower selects to fill the top uniformed posts of the various Services may depend greatly on whether or not the organization of the Joint Chiefs of Staff is changed substantially.

Secretary Lovett and General Bradley both are expected to make their views known on this subject and it is a certainty that these officials will recommend some changes.

Also, during recent weeks there has been an emphatic call for a sweeping reorganization of the JCS from Dr. Vannevar Bush, president of Carnegie Institution. He wants JCS members separated from assignment as Chiefs of Staff or Chief of Naval Operations and he wants the JCS to be exclusively a planning organization, with command responsibility in the hands of the Secretary of Defense and the President.

The fact that after 20 Jan. 1953, the Nation will have as President one of the outstanding military commanders of all time can be expected to have considerable effect on the reception which Congress gives to proposals for changes in the JCS.

After 20 Jan. 1953, interest will be keen, particularly among those in uniform, as to the relationship of President Eisenhower to Congress in the matter of military legislation and the relationship of the only five-star military officer ever elected Commander-in-Chief to all of the Armed Services.
